List of Contributors

Arely L. Acuña is adjunct Assistant Professor of Higher Education at the University of Southern California. Her research explores the educational experiences of historically underrepresented students, particularly immigrant and undocumented students, as well as the role of student organizations as grassroots efforts in higher education. As a practitioner-scholar, she seeks to promote access and equitable outcomes for students in colleges and universities.

Genny Beemyn is the Director of the University of Massachusetts-Amherst's Stonewall Center and the coordinator of Campus Pride's Trans Policy Clearinghouse. They have published and spoken extensively on the experiences and needs of trans college students, including writing some of the first articles on the topic. Among the books they have authored are A Queer Capital: A History of Gay Life in Washington, D.C. and The Lives of Transgender People. Genny's most recent book is an anthology, Trans People in Higher Education. They are currently writing Campus Queer: Addressing the Needs of LGBTQA+ College Students and co-editing The Encyclopedia of Trans Studies.

Ashley S. Boyd is Associate Professor of English Education at Washington State University, where she teaches courses on critical and cultural theory, young adult literature, and methods of teaching. Boyd's current research investigates the development and enactment of social action projects with secondary students. Her book with Teachers College Press, Social Justice Literacies in the English Classroom: Teaching Practice in Action, analyzes case studies of practicing English teachers to identify specific pedagogic approaches for advancing equity both inside and outside of the classroom.

Penny Jane Burke is Global Innovation Chair of Equity and Director of the Centre of Excellence in Equity in Higher Education at the University of Newcastle, Australia. Passionately dedicated to developing methodological, theoretical, and pedagogical frameworks that support critical understanding and practice of equity and social justice in higher education, her authored books include Accessing Education: Effectively Widening Participation (2002, Trentham Books), Reconceptualising Lifelong Learning: Feminist Interventions (Burke and Jackson, 2007, Routledge), The Right to Higher Education (2012, Routledge) and Changing Pedagogical Spaces in Higher Education (Burke, Crozier, and Misiaszek, 2016, Routledge). She is an executive editor of Teaching in Higher Education, honorary professor at the University of Exeter, and has held the posts of professor at the University of Roehampton and the University of Sussex and reader at the Institute of Education, University of London.

Erin B. Ciarimboli is the Senior Academic Advising Specialist and Director of Pre-Professional Advising at the University of Connecticut. Her research interests include the intersection of college access and policy, the sociology of higher education, and innovation and change in the independent college sector. Erin has been actively committed to college access and immigration issues through her leadership at U-Lead Athens, a non-profit organization dedicated to equal access to higher education for un(der)documented and first-generation students of immigrant families.

Lindsay B. Coco is Assistant Director for Initiatives in the Division of Academic Enhancement at the University of Georgia. Her research interests include internationalization, international student recruitment and mobility, and institutional resource stratification and gender in higher education. Her research collaborations include articles in the Journal of Higher Education and Teachers College Record, as well as a co-authored book chapter in Higher Education, Stratification, and Workforce Development: Competitive Advantage in Europe, the US, and Canada.

Nicole Cote is an admission counselor at the Parsons School of Design in New York City. After completing undergraduate study in fine arts, she pursued a Master of Arts in Higher Education Administration and Policy at the University of Denver, graduating in 2018. She is currently pursuing media studies coursework at the Schools of Public Engagement at the New School with the intention of pursuing a PhD in this field. Her research interests include American media and its effects on body image and university support services for survivors of sexual assault and domestic violence.

Jolyn E. Dahlvig serves as the Associate Dean of Students for the Portland-Metro campus of Oregon Tech, Oregon's polytechnic university. She has taught masters and doctoral higher education courses for Geneva College (PA), University of Louisville (KY), Azusa Pacific University (CA), Whitworth University (WA), and George Fox University (OR). Her primary research interests relate to gender and leadership, college student leader identity development, and college student success.

Alan D. DeSantis is a Professor of Communication at the University of Kentucky. His research focuses on Greek life, gender and masculinity, the illicit use of ADHD stimulants (featured on CBS's 60 Minutes), and the depiction and representation of collegiate life in American film. He is the author of Inside Greek U: Fraternities, Sororities, and the Pursuit of Pleasure, Power, and Prestige.

Sora H. Friedman is Professor and Chair of International Education at SIT Graduate Institute, where she teaches and advises international education graduate students.

Friedman has worked in the field since 1984, focusing on the preparation of new professionals, exchange program management, public diplomacy, and policy advocacy. Her recent research explores gender parity in senior international education leadership. She is also the co-author of Careers in International Education: A Guide for New Professionals (2019).

Ally Garcia received her Doctor of Education from the University of Denver. She currently serves as Assistant Dean/Director of TRIO Student Support Services at Metropolitan State University-Denver. In addition, Garcia is a research assistant for Alliance for PROS, teaches a course on race and racism at the University of Denver, and has facilitated numerous workshops on diversity and equity issues. She is currently engaged in research regarding policy in higher education. Her doctoral research is entitled A Policy Discourse Analysis of Disciplinary Transcript Notation in Cases of Sexual Assault on College Campuses.

Matthew Jeffries serves as Director of the Gender Identity/Expression and Sexual Orientation Resource Center at Washington State University. In this role, he supports system-level change and six campuses in their creation and implementation of LGBTQ+ affirming policies and procedures. Additionally, he supports students and channels their energy for activism into tangible, material change. Prior to this role, he worked in academic advising, new student programs, and residence life.

Jody Jessup-Anger is Associate Professor of Higher Education and Program Coordinator of the Student Affairs in Higher Education master's program at Marquette University. Her research explores how the interaction of students and the collegiate environment affects student development and learning. She is co-editor (with Keith Edwards) of a 2018 New Directions for Student Services monograph, Addressing Sexual Violence in Student Affairs and Higher Education. Jessup-Anger co-led the Elon University Center for Engaged Learning 2017-2019 Research Seminar on Residential Learning Communities, a summer institute that promotes multi-institutional research collaboration on high-impact practices in higher education.

Emily A. Johnson is Assistant Professor of Higher Education Administration at the University of Southern Mississippi. In addition to gender and sexual spectra, their research involves the intersections of equity, institutional research, and student-focused practices. Recent studies examined syllabi construction, course withdrawal, and the experiences of early, Black honors students. They are particularly interested in identifying better ways to better retain and support students of all identities and in reforming higher education from a focus on capitalism to a focus on equity.

T.J. Jourian is an independent scholar, consultant, and speaker with Trans*Formational Change, LLC. Centering trans and queer people of colors' experiences and epistemologies, his research examines race, gender, and sexuality in higher education. He co-founded Trans*Forming Higher Education (T.H.E) Collaborative (formerly T*Circle) and the Journal of Critical Scholarship on Higher Education and Student Affairs. Along with Dr. Antonio Duran, he is currently completing a narrative inquiry study examining gender and sexuality center professionals' engagement with anti-racism.
