BLACKWELL COMPANIONS TO HISTORY

“Any library owning ... Blackwell Companions will be a rich library indeed.” Reference Reviews

This series provides sophisticated and authoritative overviews of the scholarship that has shaped our current understanding of the past. Each volume comprises between twenty-five and forty essays written by individual scholars within their area of specialization. The aim of each volume is to synthesize the current state of scholarship from a variety of historical perspectives and to provide a statement on where the field is heading. The essays are written in a clear, provocative, and lively manner, designed for an international audience of scholars, students, and general readers.

BLACKWELL COMPANIONS TO WORLD HISTORY

These Companions tackle the historiography of thematic and regional topics as well as events in world history. The series includes volumes on Historical Thought, the World Wars, Mediterranean History, Middle Eastern History, Gender History, and many more.

BLACKWELL COMPANIONS TO EUROPEAN HISTORY

This series of chronological volumes covers periods of European history, starting with medieval history and continuing up through the period since 1945. Periods include the Long Eighteenth Century, the Reformation, the Renaissance, and 1900 to 1945, among others.

BLACKWELL COMPANIONS TO BRITISH HISTORY

This branch of the Blackwell Companions to History series delves into the history of Britain, with chronological volumes covering British history from 500 CE to 2000 CE.

Volume editors include Pauline Stafford, Norman Jones, Barry Coward, and more.

BLACKWELL COMPANIONS TO AMERICAN HISTORY

Including thematic and chronological volumes on American history as well as a subseries covering the historiography of the American presidents, this strand of the Blackwell Companions series seeks to engage with the questions and controversies of US history. Thematic volumes include American Science, Sport History, Legal History, Cultural History, and more. Additional volumes address key events, regions, and influential individuals that have shaped America's past.

About the Editors

Teresa A. Meade is Florence B. Sherwood Professor of History and Culture, Union College, Schenectady, New York. She has focused on integrating issues of gender and ethnicity into the Latin American historical narrative as a teacher of undergraduate students and author of A History of Modern Latin America, 1800 to the Present (2009, 2016) and A Brief History of Brazil (2002, 2009). In addition to authoring and editing other books and journals, she is a member of the Editorial Collective of Radical History Review and former president of the Board of Trustees of The Journal of Women's History.

Merry E. Wiesner-Hanks is Distinguished Professor of History and Women's and Gender Studies Emerita at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. She is the long-time senior editor of the Sixteenth Century Journal, former editor of the Journal of Global History, and the editor-in-chief of the seven-volume Cambridge World History. She is the author or editor of thirty books and many articles that have appeared in English, German, French, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Greek, Chinese, Turkish, and Korean, and are widely used in teaching around the world, including Gender in History: Global Perspectives and Women and Gender in Early Modern Europe. Her research has been supported by grants from the Fulbright and Guggenheim Foundations, among others.

Contributors

Patricia Acerbi teaches history at George Washington University and through the Clemente Course in the Humanities at Bard College. She is the author of Street Occupations: Urban Vending in Rio de Janeiro, 1850-1925 (2017) and a number of journal articles and book chapters.

Susan D. Amussen is Professor of History at the University of California, Merced. She is the author of An Ordered Society: Gender and Class in Early Modern England (1988); Caribbean Exchanges: Slavery and the Transformation of English Society (2007); and (with David Underdown) Gender, Culture and Politics in England, 1560-1640: Turning the World Upside Down (2017).

Barbara Watson Andaya is Professor in the Asian Studies Program at the University of Hawai'i. A historian by training, her most recent books are The Flaming Womb: Repositioning Women in Southeast Asian History, 1500-1800 (2006) and A History of Early Modern Southeast Asia (2016). She is General Editor of the new Cambridge History of Southeast Asia and is working on a book on gender in sexuality in Southeast Asia from early times to the present.

Nupur Chaudhuri is Professor of History at Texas Southern University. She is the author of many articles, and the co-editor of a number of books, including: with Margaret Strobel, Western Women and Imperialism: Complicity and Resistance (1992), with Ruth Roach Pierson, Nation, Empire, Colony: Critical Categories of Gender and Race Analysis (1998), with Eileen Boris, Voices of Women Historians: Personal, Professional and Political (1999), and with Sherry Katz and Mary Elizabeth Perry, Contesting Archives: Finding Women in the Sources (2010).

Marcia-Anne Dobres is Lecturer in Anthropology at the University of Southern Maine. She is the author of Technology and Social Agency (2000) and has co-edited Agency in Archaeology (2000) and The Social Dynamics of Technology (1999). She is currently investigating the social technology of Ice Age cave art in the French Pyrénées (c. 14,000 years ago) to understand its role in facilitating the negotiation of gender and social agency.

Laura Levine Frader is Professor of History at Northeastern University, and was the holder of the first Gender Equality Chair at the Université de Sorbonne Paris Cité (USCP). Her publications include Gender and Class in Modern Europe, co-edited with Sonya O. Rose, (1996), and Breadwinners and Citizens: Gender in the Making of the French Social Model (2008).

Patricia Grimshaw is Professor Emerita in the School of Historical and Philosophical Studies at the University of Melbourne where she taught women's and gender history from the 1980s. Her publications include Women's Suffrage in New Zealand (1972), Paths of Duty: American Mission Women in Nineteenth Century Hawai'i (1989), Equal Subjects, Unequal Citizens: Indigenous Peoples in Britain's Settler Colonies (2003), and, most recently, White Women, Aboriginal Missions and Australian Settler Governments: Maternal Contradictions (2019).

Julie Hardwick is Professor of History at the University of Texas at Austin. She is the author of The Practice of Patriarchy: The Politics of Household Life in Early Modern France (1998), Family Business: Litigation and the Political Economy of Daily Life in Early Modern France (2009), and Sex in an Old Regime City: Young People, Intimacy and Work in France, 1660-1789 (2020).

Raevin Jimenez is LSA (Literature, Science, and Arts) Collegiate Fellow at the University of Michigan-Ann Arbor.

She specializes in precolonial African history, and is currently working on a book Guard against the Cannibals: Gender, Generation, and Political Identity in Southern Africa, 9th-19th Century.

Rosemary A. Joyce is Professor of Anthropology at the University of California, Berkeley. Her experience as a field archaeologist conducting research in Honduras and Mexico, and as a museum anthropologist examining collections in museums through Europe and North America, informs her work on the way that sex and gender are shaped and anchored through materials ranging from clothing and jewelry to images depicting gendered stereotypes. She is the author of ten books including Gender and Power in Prehispanic Mesoamerica (2001), Embodied Lives (with Lynn Meskell; 2003), and Ancient Bodies, Ancient Lives (2008).

Darlene M. Juschka is Associate Professor in the Department of Gender, Religious and Critical Studies at the University of Regina. Her areas of interest are semiotics, critical theory, feminisms, and posthumanism. Some of her more recent work includes “Feminisms and the Study of Religion in the 21st Century,” Berlin Journal of Critical Theory (2018), “Feminist Approaches to the Study of Religion,” in Richard King, ed., Religion, Theory, Critique: Classic and Contemporary Approaches (2017), and “Indigenous Women and Reproductive Justice - A Narrative,” in Carrie Bourassa, Betty McKenna and Darlene Juschka, eds., Listening to the Beat of our Drum: Stories in Indigenous Parenting in Contemporary Society (2017).

Amy Kallander is Associate Professor of Middle East History and affiliated faculty with the Women's and Gender Studies Department at Syracuse University. Her first book, Women, Gender, and the Palace Households in Ottoman Tunisia (2013) examines the political, economic, and social roles of elite women between 1700 and 1900. She is currently working on a book examining gender and modern womanhood in the Middle East and Tunisia in particular in the global 1960s.

Linda Kealey is Professor Emerita at the University of New Brunswick in Fredericton, NB, Canada specializing in Canadian women's history with particular focus on labour, left-wing politics and health. She is the editor or co-editor of several volumes on Canadian women's history, a former co-editor of the Canadian Historical Review and former co-editor (2003–2006) of Atlantis: A Women's Studies Journal.

Deirdre Keenan is Professor Emerita in the Department of English, Carroll College, where she taught Postcolonial Literature, American Indian Studies, Milton, and Renaissance Literature.

Susan Kingsley Kent is an Arts and Sciences Professor of Distinction in the Department of History at the University of Colorado, Boulder. She is the author of numerous books, including Gender and Power in Britain, 1640–1990 (1999), Gender and History (2011), and, most recently, Gender: A World History, forthcoming from Oxford University Press.

Sonya Lipsett-Rivera is Professor of History at Carleton University in Canada. She is the author of Gender and the Negotiation of Life in Mexico, 1750–1856 (2012) and The Origins of Macho: Men and Masculinity in Colonial Mexico (2019).

Barbara Molony is Professor of History at Santa Clara University. She is the author or editor of a number of works that examine Japan and East Asia in a transnational perspective, including (with Kathleen Uno) Gendering Modern Japanese History (2005), (with Janet Theiss and Hyaeweol Choi) Gender in Modern East Asia (2015), and (with Jennifer Nelson) Women's Activism and "Second Wave" Feminism: Transnational Histories (2017).

Robert A. Nye is Horning Professor of the Humanities and Professor of History Emeritus at Oregon State University. He is the author of Masculinity and Male Codes of Honor in Modern France (1993, 1998) and an Oxford reader, Sexuality (1999).

Vivian-Lee Nyitray is Associate Vice Provost and Executive Director, the University of California Education Abroad Programs. Prior to this she was a member of the Religious Studies faculty at UC Riverside. Her publications include The Life of Chinese Religion (2004), co-edited with Ron Guey Chu, and the forthcoming Women and Chinese Religion: Persuasion and Power.

Jocelyn Olcott is the Margaret Taylor Smith Director of the Program in Gender, Sexuality, and Feminist Studies and a Professor of History and International Comparative Studies at Duke University. She is the author of Revolutionary Women in Postrevolutionary Mexico (2005) and International Women's Year: The Greatest Consciousness-Raising Event in History (2017), and co-editor with Mary Kay Vaughan and Gabriela Cano of Sex in Revolution: Gender, Politics, and Power in Modern Mexico (2006; in translation 2009).
