

Stefan J. Schill

Spiritual Healing

Hands-On Healing - Conjuring - Correction of pelvic obliquity

Content:

Spiritual Healing Instruction

Conclusion

Hands-On Healing

Definition of some Terms

Chakras and their Connection to body and psyche

Access to practical experiences

The Treatment

- Chakra Compensation

- Distant Treatment

- Self Treatments

Incantations to charm away warts, shingles and other diseases

Mental inputs

Pelvic Obliquity

The neutral erection and straightening

Legal suggestions

Code of Conduct

Tips for your own office and your own website

Part I

Spiritual Healing Instruction

Since March 2004 it is legal to practise spiritual healing in Germany, without being a certified natural health professional. This is an information only for example.

Spiritual Healing is completely legally in many countries. Please, find out about how the law situation is in your country. You get more information about it in your city hall or the city administration.

These lessons will help you to become a spiritual healer, who will support people to overcome their diseases.

Please note:

This text addresses male and female healers alike, although this is not explicitly mentioned to keep this text easily readable.

The training is divided in different parts.

This is, what you will learn:

- Hands-on healing
- Chakra compensation
- Distant treatments
- Conjuring
- Mental treatments
- Correction of pelvic obliquity
- Legal suggestions
- Financial tips

- Code of conduct
- Behaviour towards persons seeking help
- Tips for your own office and your own website

The course is divided in 3 parts. In between these parts, you can already work in your own office to gather experience. Of course you can address me during the time of the instruction and after for at least 2 more years.

At a first glance this seems to be a lot and maybe even too much, but trust me. Everyday experiences show, that the work of a healer is much more extensive. These are just the basics.

An everyday question is: "What is spiritual healing?" The terms "spiritual healing" or "spiritual healer" are quite common, but there are no ghosts or the brain itself involved! "Spiritual healing" is rather "healing through God" or (if you prefer) through a higher instance. This is how the following terms should be understood.

Probably everyone already heard about "wise" women or men, who are able to use incantations to charm away warts and shingles. Again and again there are reports about allegedly faith healers, who have conjured away cancer, HIV, paralysis and other diseases.

Well...be honest...you cannot believe that, can you? Right! Usually it cannot happen that fast, but it is possible to ease or even to heal a disease in several sessions using hands-on healing, reciting prayers or "conjuring". When accepting this form of help, you can also accept, that these treatments will even work without personal contact between patient and healer.

Hard to imagine? This is the usual reaction. Most of the times it happens like this: The doctor says: "I cannot do anything for you anymore. Try... who "conjures" warts, shingles and other diseases..." When a healer treats the patients, they often recover after many years of suffering.

Of course - and needless to say - the treatment of a healer cannot replace a doctor's visit! Every reliable healer will ask his patients, if they are under medical treatment. Remember, that a healer cannot and must not make a diagnosis (unless the healer is a doctor or a natural health professional). Within the meaning of the law the treatment of a healer is not a medical or a naturopathic treatment, because the healer treats the person, who is ill and not the disease itself. It is not a decision between "spiritual healing" or "traditional medicine", rather "medicine" and "spiritual healing". If there are acute cases, accidents, and undefined health problems, then a doctor has to be involved first. "Spiritual healing" can help patients with chronic diseases or "beyond treatment". (Someone who suffers from back pain would not only just go to a massage or a physiotherapist either.)

Just imagine a patient with pain in his chest for several days. The healer treats him; the patient feels much better, but dies two hours later because of a heart attack. A correct diagnosis and the right medical treatment in time probably would have saved him.

Another possible case: A very athletic patient has pain in his arm. The healer treats him for several months until it gets a little bit better. During a medical examination, due to other reasons, the doctors discover bone cancer in this arm. If the diagnosis and the medical treatment were made in time, then the disease would have been cured faster and the patient probably healthy again. The cooperation between a doctor and a healer would have been much more effective.

Conclusion:

No reliable healer would advise a patient against going to a doctor and most of them only treat patients, when there is a diagnosis made by a doctor. This is no charlatany (as some critics assume) to rip ill people off, but an additional treatment, which efficiency was even proven in scientific controlled double-blind trials!

Most healers do not "give" something from themselves! They rather see themselves just as a transmitter between a higher (divine, universal or life) power and the suffering human being. The work of a healer is very much the same work, the clericals have always done (when they followed their clerical duties and brought salvation): Bring God's help and power to the people. Many healers like to think of themselves as chaplains, who care for a healthy soul which cures the body.

Healing is also listening. Many persons seeking help have already been to many doctor's offices and hospitals, until they finally go to a healer. Usually a healer is the last and final attempt just before resignation. Everything else has already been done: x-rays, blood exam, spinal fluid, or even tissue samples have been extracted and other - often painful - examinations have been made. Often with no results or the doctors could not do anything for the patient anymore.

Always listen to the medical records first. You will get important information about the person. The person seeking help can be impatient or rather submissive. There are people who fight for their health and others who already have given up.

The most important question of those, who seek help is always: "Can you help me?" And your answer should be: "I will try." As a healer you can promise to give your best, but you must not promise cure! You cannot know the progress of the disease or how much time is left in the plan of life of the person seeking help. Doctors and natural health professionals cannot promise cure and neither can we.