

The Palgrave Handbook of Script Development

Edited by
Stayci Taylor · Craig Batty

palgrave
macmillan

The Palgrave Handbook of Script Development

Stayci Taylor · Craig Batty
Editors

The Palgrave Handbook of Script Development

palgrave
macmillan

Editors

Stayci Taylor
RMIT University
Melbourne, Australia

Craig Batty
University of South Australia
Adelaide, Australia

ISBN 978-3-030-82233-0      ISBN 978-3-030-82234-7 (eBook)

<https://doi.org/10.1007/978-3-030-82234-7>

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s), under exclusive license to Springer Nature Switzerland AG 2021, corrected publication 2022

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed. The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, expressed or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

Cover illustration: malerapaso/Getty Images

This Palgrave Macmillan imprint is published by the registered company Springer Nature Switzerland AG

The registered company address is: Gewerbestrasse 11, 6330 Cham, Switzerland

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book would not be here without its contributors, who continued to get their ideas down and keep their spirits up through extremely trying times. Thank you for bringing your rich and diverse ideas to our readers. Thank you, too, to the team at Palgrave, especially for allowing us to produce another book on script development. To colleagues and friends at RMIT University and the University of South Australia, for moral and academic support.

Stayci would like to thank Craig for consistently bringing the puns. Craig would like to thank Stayci for laughing at his jokes—and subsequently giving them an edit.

CONTENTS

Introduction	1
Stayci Taylor and Craig Batty
‘Behind the Scenes’ of Script Development
The Feedback Phenomenon: Dealing with Multiple Voices in the Development of Original Screenplays	9
Siri Senje
Script Readers as Gatekeepers: Demystifying Processes of Script Coverage	33
James Napoli
A Creative Pilgrimage: Negotiating Authenticity, Creativity and Budget in the Medieval Web Series Tales of Bacon	47
Maxine Gee
Creating the Low-Budget Feature Film Script: Development as Emergence	59
Simon Weaving
Script Development on Unscripted Television: Grand Designs and the Spectacle of the Reveal	71
Lucy Brown
Saying What Must Not Be Said: Exploring Communication in the Script Development Process	87
Wendy Bevan-Mogg
Scripting the Experimental Documentary Film: Developing the “Script” for Not Reconciled	103
Jill Daniels

Negotiating Television Authorship and Gendering Creative Identity: Vicki Madden as Australian Showrunner	121
Radha O'Meara and Cath Moore
Constructing Criticism Without Crushing Confidence: Cultures of Feedback in Television Script Development	135
Marie Macneill
The Business of Script Development: Insights from Industry Practitioners	147
Stayci Taylor and Craig Batty
Script Development in Time and Place
Doctoring La Cacería, Las Niñas De Alto Hospicio: Issues in Cross-Cultural Script Consulting	163
Jeff Rush
Script Development as a Collective Enterprise: The Writing of the Indigenous Feature Film Waru	175
Christina Milligan
Independent, Short and Controversial: The Script Development of San Sabba	187
Romana Turina
How Angelica Became The Strange Case of Angelica: From the Idea to the Script to the Book to the Film	201
Rita Benis
Scripting for the Masses: Notes on the Political Economy of Bollywood	217
Rakesh Sengupta
The Relational Language of First Nations Cultural Sensibilities, Principles and Storytelling Ethics as an Intercultural Approach to Script Development	229
Sharon Huebner and Ezzard Flowers
Writers' Room and Showrunner: Discourses and Practices in the German Television Industry	251
Florian Krauß
The ASEAN ROK SCREENPLAY LAB: Voices Across Asia—Stories About Rice	267
Gabrielle Kelly
Textual Manifestations of Collaborative Screen Idea and Story Development: A Danish Case Study	279
Cath Moore

Scottish Modernism Goes to New Hollywood: Tracing the Script Development of Alan Sharp's Night Moves	295
River Seager
Alternative Approaches
Creating Kaleidoscopic Characters: Working with Performance to Develop Character Stories Prior to Screen Story	309
Angie Black and Anna Dzenis
Lean Script Development in the Available Materials School of Filmmaking: This Is Dedicated to The One I Love	327
Andrew Kenneth Gay
Pedagogy-Led Practice and Practice-Led Pedagogy: A Feedback Loop of Teaching and Screenwriting	341
Hannah Ianniello and Marco Ianniello
A Comparative Study of the Novel O Quatrilho and its Adapted Screenplays: Researching the Script Development Process	359
Clarissa Mazon Miranda
Scripting and the Multimodal Screenplay Within the Script Development Process	375
David Moore
Don't Eat My Baby: Collisions, Development and Indigenous Consultation in the Australian Family Feature Film Screenplay, Dingo	391
Rachel Landers
The Application of an 'Eternal Dance' Methodology in the Development of an Original Screenplay	407
Rose Ferrell
A Collaborative Reflection Between Writer, Director and Actors: Table Read as Scriptwriting 'Intervention'	425
Susan Cake
Hitting the Road: Performing the Journey as a Development Strategy in Paris, Texas and Goodbye Pork Pie	437
Hester Joyce and Jade Jontef
Development Across the Intercultural Divide: Scripting Stories with 'Other' Groups	451
Christopher Gist

Unique Contexts of Script Development

- Productive Interventions: Collaborative Script Development for Stories About Mental Health Issues and Suicide 469
Fincina Hopgood

- Place, Presence and Play: A Listening, Co-Active Approach to Story Development 485
Marianne Strand and Christina Svens

- Crafting Immersive Experiences: A Case Study of the Development of Three Short Narrative Cinematic Virtual Reality (CVR) Projects 503
Kath Dooley

- The Screenplay as a Means of Communication: The Case of *Notorious 517
Claus Tieber

- Between Video Games and Television Shows, Towards Meta Script Development Practices? 531
Marida Di Crosta

- Developing Texts for Animated Opera: A Unique Case Study 545
Olga Kolokytha

- From Comedy to Drama: The Curious Case Study of *Queenpin 557
Rafael Leal

- ‘You Never Know Who is in Control’: German Transmedia Content Development 569
Sarah Renger

- Violet City*: Script Development from Novel to Green Screen Fantasy Feature 585
Dave Jackson

- Checking The Black List Twice: The Ambiguous Industry Role of Script Development Services 599
Anthony Twarog

- Correction to: Lean Script Development in the Available Materials School of Filmmaking: This Is Dedicated to *The One I Love C1
Andrew Kenneth Gay

- Index 611

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Craig Batty is Dean of Research (Creative) at the University of South Australia. He is the author, co-author and editor of 15 books, including Writing for the Screen: Creative and Critical Approaches (2nd ed.) (2019), Screen Production Research: Creative Practice as a Mode of Enquiry (2018) and Screenwriters and Screenwriting: Putting Practice into Context (2014). He has also published book chapters and journal articles on the topics of screenwriting practice, screenwriting theory, creative practice research and doctoral supervision. Craig is also a screenwriter and script consultant, with experiences in short film, feature film, television and online drama.

Rita Benis is a researcher at the Centre for Comparative Studies (Faculty of Letters, University of Lisbon). With a grant from FCT, she is currently finishing her doctorate on Manoel de Oliveira's screenplays. She has a Master's degree in Comparative Literature and teaches Screenwriting and History of Cinema. Rita is a member of the research project Cinema and the World, and she co-edited the electronic magazine Falso Movimento (also published, 2015). She has translated books and published articles/chapters on the relationship between image and writing. An award-winning screenwriter, she has worked in cinema since 2000 and has collaborated with Teresa Villaverde, Margarida Gil, Inês Oliveira, António Cunha Telles, Jorge Cramez, Vincent Gallo and Catherine Breillat.

Wendy Bevan-Mogg is Programme Leader for the M.A. in Producing Film and Television at Bournemouth University. She began her career working for distributor Artificial Eye and sales agent Pathé International, before moving into production. She has worked as a script editor, producer, executive producer and line producer, with notable credits including Nick Whitfield's Skeletons (winner of the Michael Powell Award for Best British Feature at the Edinburgh International Film Festival 2010), Rufus Norris' Broken (Critics' Week, Cannes 2012) and Esther May Campbell's Light Years (Critics' Week, Venice Film Festival 2015). Before joining Bournemouth, she spent two years in the development team at Creative England and taught at Leeds Trinity University.

Angie Black is a senior lecturer in Film & Television at VCA, University of Melbourne and a multiple-award winning filmmaker. Her debut feature film The Five Provocations (2018), premiered at The Melbourne Queer Film Festival, was likened to “a Luis Buñuel or David Lynch film” at the Adelaide Film Festival and distributed by Label Distribution. Black has directed more than ten short films, including award-winning short films Bowl Me Over (2001), winner best comedy St. Kilda Film Festival and distributed by Palace Films, and Birthday Girl (2008), winner audience award Women on Film Festival and selected for the Australian Women’s horror anthology Dark Whispers Vol. 1 (2019). She has a Ph.D. on performance approaches in film production and an M.A. in screenwriting. Her extensive body of film work utilises practice-led research to explore innovative approaches to filmmaking and actively promote on screen diversity.

Lucy Brown is an associate professor and Head of Division for Film at London South Bank University. She is an authority in film and television with 20+ years’ experience as an educator and practitioner. She began her career at the British Film Institute before moving into production. She has filmed around the world for the BBC, ITV, Channel 4, Disney and Nickelodeon and has credits on multiple BAFTA and Royal Television Society programmes, including the acclaimed series Grand Designs (1999–). Lucy is a passionate advocate for equality, diversity and inclusion. She is Founder of Women in Screen and Chair of Trailblazing Women On and Off Screen and the Media Education Diversity Group for the National Association for Higher Education in the Moving Image (NAHEMI). She is Senior Fellow of the Higher Education Academy, winner of several Excellence in Education Awards and co-author of The TV Studio Production Handbook (Bloomsbury).

Susan Cake teaches scriptwriting at Queensland University of Technology. Her doctoral research focused on reflective and creative writing processes to examine how writing narrative comedy performed creative resistance against the corporatisation of education. She has over 15 years’ experience teaching screen production in the vocational education and training (VET) sector and is a screen and media curriculum specialist. Susan has written screen and media curriculum for Australian and overseas education and training organisations and was the curriculum specialist for a $250,000 ABC-funded project to support TVET Journalism training in the South Pacific. Susan’s current research explores expanding conceptions of writing for “the screen”.

Jill Daniels is a filmmaker and Senior Lecturer in Film at the University of East London. She has been making films since 1989 and has won many international awards, including Best Experimental Film for My Private Life II (2015) at Ann Arbor Film Festival in 2017. Her current practice focuses on memory, place and subjectivities in documentary film. She is the author of Memory, Place and Autobiography: Experiments in Documentary Filmmaking (2019) and co-editor of Truth, Dare or Promise: Art and Documentary Revisited (2013). She is a member of the editorial board of the journal Media, Practice and Education. Not Reconciled (2009) was produced as part of her practice-led Ph.D. and is published in Screenworks (Vol. 3) [Online], available at: <http://screenworks.org.uk/archive/volume-3/not-reconciled>.

Marida Di Crosta is Associate Professor at LYON-3 University, where she teaches screenwriting and story design for digital media. The founder of a two-year Master's Degree in Screenwriting for multiplatform content, she is the author of several publications on interactivity within narrative design and strategies. A former writer/producer, Di Crosta also worked on various interactive drama projects. Her research has progressively been focused on data-driven storytelling and the use of AI algorithms in scriptwriting.

Kath Dooley is a filmmaker and academic in the Discipline of Theatre, Screen and Immersive Media at Curtin University, Western Australia. She is the author of Cinematic Virtual Reality—A Critical Study of 21st Century Approaches and Practices (Palgrave Macmillan, forthcoming 2021) and the co-editor of The Palgrave Handbook of Screen Production (2019). Kath has written a number of short and feature-length screenplays, and has directed several award-winning short screen works. Her research interests include screen production methodology for traditional and immersive media, screenwriting and diversity in screen practice and education.

Anna Dzenis is a Screen Studies lecturer and researcher who has taught at La Trobe University, Victorian College of the Arts and RMIT University (Melbourne, Australia). She teaches screen literacy, screen criticism, world cinema, film history and theories of visibility. She is a scholar of photography and cinema and brings these two disciplines together in her teaching and research. She is the co-editor of the online journal Screening the Past, and has published essays in Senses of Cinema, Screening the Past, Lola, Real Time, Metro, The Conversation, 24 Frames: Australia and New Zealand, The Oxford Companion to Australian Film, Screen Hub and The Routledge Encyclopaedia of Films.

Rose Ferrell is a screenwriting researcher and an independent screenwriter and filmmaker with three decades' experience as a technician and writer in drama, documentary and commercial production. Her specialist research is on the screenwriter's voice, particularly exploring the interrelationships between cultural inflection and voice in screenwriting creative practice. Her work has appeared in several publications, including in the Palgrave Handbook series (2019, and this present publication). Rose currently lives in regional Western Australia where she finds inspiration for madcap dramatic characters and off-beat adventure in that stunning frontier, the wild Australian west.

Ezzard Flowers is a Wirlomin and Minang Noongar from the Great Southern region of Western Australia. He was born on the United Aborigines Mission Gnowangerup in 1958. In 2015, Ezzard was awarded the John Curtin Medal at Curtin University in Western Australia. This award acknowledged Ezzard's contribution to the "Koorah Coolingah" (Children Long Time Ago) exhibition, a major arts project held in the regional town of Katanning in the Great Southern of Western Australia and which showcased a collection of Noongar drawings that had been discovered in the Herbert A. Meyer Collection at Colgate University, in Hamilton, New York. Ezzard is an ambassador for the Badgebup Aboriginal Corporation and cultural advisor to Greening Australia. He is also the Vice-Chair of the Wirlomin Stories and Language Project and an important contributor to the Dwoort Baal Kaat Songlines Project and the Songlines and Sustainability Project. Ezzard co-developed the script for No Longer a Wandering Spirit—Imaginaries of Bessy Flowers (2016) and is the short film's narrator.

Andrew Kenneth Gay is an Associate Professor of Digital Cinema at Southern Oregon University (USA), where he teaches storytelling, screenwriting, and short film production. He earned his MFA in Entrepreneurial Digital Cinema from the University of Central Florida in 2010, and his teaching, scholarship and creative practice have focused on the intersection of story development and "lean" entrepreneurial principles. He has published peer-reviewed scholarship on screenwriting and script development, including "Start Me Up: Lean Screenwriting for American Entrepreneurial Cinema" in the Journal of Screenwriting (2014), an entry on German writer/director Ula Stöckl in Women Screenwriters: An International Guide (2015), and "The Cowboy, the Spaceman, and the Guru: Character and Convention in the Screenwriting of Toy Story" in Toy Story: How Pixar Reinvented the Animated Feature (2018). He also publishes the online open educational resource (OER) Screenplayology.com, which is used in college screenwriting classes across the globe.

Maxine Gee is a senior lecturer in Screenwriting at Bournemouth University and Programme Leader for the B.A. in Scriptwriting for Film and Television. She has a Ph.D. by Creative Practice in Screenwriting from the University of York. In 2015, she was a Japanese Society for the Promotion of Science Summer Fellow, while in 2016 she became a Doctoral Fellow for the Humanities Research Centre at the University of York. As a creative practitioner, Maxine has written science fiction for film, theatre and prose and is the co-writer of Tales of Bacon, a medieval comedy web series. Maxine has published on science fiction screenwriting for BSEA FOCUS magazine, and on posthuman noir in Cinema: Journal of Film and Philosophy. Her short films Terminal (2018) and Standing Woman (2020) have screened internationally at a range of film festivals.

Christopher Gist is a writer and screen content producer, previously Commissioning Editor for Australian Broadcasting Corporation (ABC) TV and TVNZ (New Zealand), and Head of Development for South Pacific Pictures. He is currently a Ph.D. candidate in screenwriting at the University of South Australia, and a sessional Honours supervisor for the Victorian College of the Arts, University of Melbourne.

Fincina Hopgood is Lecturer in Screen Studies at the University of New England, Australia, with research expertise in Australian film and television, and portrayals of mental health and human rights on screen. A former editor of Senses of Cinema, Fincina's work has been published in academic journals including Screen, Adaptation and Australasian Journal of Popular Culture, and edited collections Australian Screen in the 2000s, American-Australian Cinema: Transnational Connections and On The Island: Film, Television, Autism (forthcoming). Fincina is currently writing a monograph for Palgrave Macmillan Moving Images of Mental Illness on Australian Screens: The shift towards empathy.

Sharon Huebner is a multi-disciplinary researcher in the complex spaces of relational collaborations, politics of agency, applied ethics and Indigenous principles, practices and governance. She received an Australian Research Council (ARC) Discovery Early Career Researcher Award (DECRA) for a fellowship commencing 2022, and holds a Ph.D. from Monash University, Australia, 2016. Sharon is co-writer and director of No Longer a Wandering Spirit – Imaginaries of Bessy Flowers (2016).

Hannah Ianniello is an academic and writer from Sydney. She has numerous academic and creative publications in international journals and was most recently the featured writer in the Honeyguide Literary Magazine (US). Hannah is an award-winning screenwriter and her academic research bridges literature, screenwriting and musicoliterary theory with a focus on the representation of jazz musicians and violence. Hannah holds a Ph.D. from Western Sydney University and a Masters of Creative Writing from The University of Sydney. She specialises in teaching screenwriting, creative writing and academic writing at both undergraduate and postgraduate levels.

Marco Ianniello is Head of Film and Screen Production at The University of Notre Dame Australia. He is an award-winning filmmaker and screenwriter and his work was screened at festivals around the world and on Australian television. He is currently completing a screenwriting practice Ph.D. investigating the structuring of long-form screenplays and the nature of change in the television drama protagonist.

Dave Jackson is a screenwriter, novelist, songwriter and senior lecturer in Creative Writing at Liverpool John Moores University. His Ph.D. by creative practice was entitled Violet City: Personal & Cultural Mythologies in the Development of a Fantasy Novel. The novel, published by Mediadrome in 2017, became the basis for the screenplay for the micro-budget feature film of the same name. Violet City (2015) has been digitally distributed by Indie Rights through Amazon Prime, VUDU, iTunes and other digital platforms between 2016 and 2019. It is now available on YouTube. Prior to entering academia, Dave Jackson was singer/songwriter with various post-punk and alternative rock bands including, The Room, Benny Profane and Dead Cowboys. He still writes, records and performs with The Room in the Wood who released albums in 2018 and 2020.

Jade Jontef is Honorary Associate in the School of Humanities and Social Sciences at La Trobe University, Australia. She has over 10 years' experience teaching across cinema studies, legal studies and the humanities and social sciences. Jade completed her Ph.D. in Cinema Studies in 2016. Her thesis Regulating Teenage Desire: Contemporary Teen Films and the Representation of Adolescent Sex, Sexuality and Pleasure examines the relationship between classification/ratings policy, representation and experiences of teenage sex and sexuality. Her research focuses on censorship, film classification and ratings systems and the regulation of sex on screen.

Hester Joyce combines creative practice (with expertise in screenwriting, performance and screen biography) and research into screen cultures. She completed a Harry Ransom Fellowship at the University of Texas, Austin in 2015. She has served as co-editor of the Journal of Screenwriting and is co-author of New Zealand Film & Television: Institution, Industry & Cultural Change (2011). She has published articles and book chapters on screenwriting, screen aesthetics and New Zealand cinema. Hester is Adjunct Associate Professor, Humanities and Social Sciences, at La Trobe University, Australia.

Gabrielle Kelly is a screenwriter and producer of diverse content for the global marketplace. Her feature producing credits include Last Sunrise (2019), a Chinese sci-fi thriller; the Burmese Mudras Calling (2018); German-UK co-production All the Queen's Men (2001); the Paramount family film D.A.R.Y.L. (1985) and the UK-French drama Beautiful in the Morning (2019). She is also the screenwriter and producer of the indie feature All Ages Night (2009) and of many screenplays set around the world. Her script development experience includes VP of Development for producer Robert Evans and Head of Development for Sidney Lumet's New York-based company. Considered a global expert in Media/Screen Labs, Kelly has designed and run Screen Labs in Pakistan, England, Myanmar and Singapore, and was a Mentor in the first Sundance Screenwriting Lab in the Middle East.

Olga Kolokytha is Assistant Professor at the Department of Communication of the University of Vienna. She holds a Ph.D. in Cultural Institutions Studies awarded with Distinction, an M.A. in Arts Management and a B.A. in Musicology and Music Education. She has worked extensively as cultural projects manager and consultant around Europe. Her research interests include cultural and creative industries, cultural policy with emphasis on times of crises, cultural diplomacy and creative migration. She was one of the 35 representatives of the cultural sector invited by the European Commission at the Audience Development via Digital Means structured dialogue in Amsterdam and Brussels in 2015. In 2016 she received the Best Publication Award for the best published Ph.D. for the years 2013–2015 from the University of Music and the Performing Arts of Vienna and in 2018 she was among the key experts invited by the European Commission to the consultation on the future of the European Agenda for Culture.

Florian Krauß is a substitute professor in Media Literacy at the Technische Universität Dresden and research fellow at the University of Siegen, Germany, leading the project “Quality Series” as Discourse and Practice (funded by Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft, 2018–2022). Previously, Krauß was a lecturer in the Department of Media Studies in Siegen and a research associate at the Film University Babelsberg KONRAD WOLF, Potsdam. In 2011, he completed his Ph.D. thesis on the diasporic reception of Bollywood films in Germany (Bollywood Neukölln: MigrantInnen und Hindi-Filme in Deutschland [Universitätsverlag Konstanz, 2012]). He is the co-founder and co-head of Netzwerk Drehbuchforschung, the German network for screenwriting research. Recent publications on media industry studies and screenwriting research include the anthology Teen TV (Springer VS, 2020) and articles in SERIES, International Journal of TV Serial Narratives, Journal of Popular Television, VIEW Journal of European Television History & Culture and others.

Rachel Landers is a filmmaker with a Ph.D. in history. Her films have screened all over the world and won a number of prestigious awards including the Australian Documentary Prize and the Premiers History Multimedia Award. In 2011/2012 she received the NSW Premier’s History Fellowship and was appointed Head of Documentary at the Australian Film, Television and Radio School. In 2015, she released the ABC/DVA/Screen Australia documentary Lest We Forget What? for the centenary of World War I. She published her first non-fiction book Who Bombed the Hilton? with New South Books in 2016 which won the prestigious national Nib award for Excellence in Research in the Creation of a Literary Work. In 2018 she was appointed head of Media Arts and Production at UTS. She is currently working on a number of film projects and writing the monograph Hybrid Documentary and Beyond for Routledge.

Rafael Leal is a screenwriter, executive producer and lecturer at the Pontifical Catholic University, Rio de Janeiro. A Ph.D. candidate in Film at Fluminense Federal University (UFF) with a thesis about VR scripting, Rafael researches the screenwriting creative process from a practical transdisciplinary approach. He is a partner at Dedalo Productions, and his credits include A Dona da Banca (Queenpin, 2021) for CineBrasilTV and series such as As Canalhas (Bitches, 2015) for GNT, Jungle Pilot (2019) for NBC Universal, as well as the feature film Cedo Demais (Too Soon, 2021) for Fox.

Marie Macneill is a senior lecturer at the School of Film and Television, Falmouth University, Cornwall, UK. She also writes, directs, script edits and works as a story consultant, across film, television and theatre. Katbottys (2018), for which she was the writer and producer, was nominated for the Short Form Award at the Celtic Media Festival 2019, and her play The Coast-guard for which she was the writer and director was produced by Mundic Nation and garnered a 5-star review during a short tour in 2020. Later that year she was invited to be a part of Cornish Voices for the BBC Writers' Room and is currently developing a drama series for television.

Christina Milligan is a researcher-practitioner in screenwriting and screen production at Auckland University of Technology. She is an award-winning producer of feature and television dramas and documentaries, and much of her industry work reflects her indigenous heritage as a member of the Ngāti Porou tribe of the Māori people. She is completing a Ph.D. thesis on the work of the indigenous screen producer. Christina serves on the Editorial Board of the Journal of Screenwriting and is the government-appointed Chair of Te Puna Kairanga (The Premium Production Fund), a fund designed to support high-end film and television production as part of the New Zealand government's response to the effects of Covid-19 on the screen industry.

Clarissa Mazon Miranda holds a Ph.D. in Letters at Universidade Federal de Santa Maria (Brazil), conferred in 2018. Her Ph.D. thesis explores the intersemiotic translation of novels into movie scripts. She holds a Master's in Midiatic Communication at the same institution (2012) and a Bachelor of Journalism by Universidade Federal de Santa Catarina (2005). Clarissa has completed several short courses of screenwriting and works as a lecturer for Antonio Meneghetti Faculdade; as marketing and international affairs assistant for Fundação Antonio Meneghetti; as a journalist for the magazine Performance Líder, as the cultural manager for the Recanto Maestro Youth Orchestra and as a freelance screenwriter.

Cath Moore is a filmmaker, author and educator. She completed her masters in screenwriting at the Australian Film Television and Radio school before attaining a Ph.D. on Danish screenwriting practices. With a focus on screen narrative development and Scandinavian cinema she has published with the Journal of Screenwriting and Networking Knowledge: Journal of the MeCCSA Postgraduate Network. She was also a contributor to the books Refocus: The Films of Susanne Bier (Edinburgh Press, 2018) and Script Development: Critical Approaches, Creative Practices, International Perspectives (Palgrave Macmillan, 2021). Cath is currently a creative writing teaching associate at The University of Melbourne and lectures in the film and television department of the Victorian College of the Arts. Her debut novel Metal Fish Falling Snow won the 2021 Victorian Premier's YA literary award.

David Moore completed a Master's in Film & TV Production and a Master of Fine Arts in Screenwriting at the Victorian College of the Arts, Melbourne University, before commencing his Ph.D. studies in 2019 on the topic of improvisation in screenwriting applied to found footage films. For the past 20 years David has worked as a lecturer of film, screenwriting, graphic design and creative industries in the Middle East, Vietnam and Australia. David has also written and directed 15 short films, participating in many International film festivals including Abu Dhabi, San Francisco, Calgary, Tabor, Montreal and the Commonwealth Film Festival in England. He has won several awards for writing and directing his short films and has also written several feature films and a book of short stories. Prior to becoming an educator and expat, he ran his own creative design agency in Sydney, Australia for 13 years.

James Napoli has been providing story analysis to agents and independent producers in Hollywood for over twenty years. He teaches in National University's MFA in Professional Screenwriting Program, is a best-selling humour author and the writer-director of two award winning short films.

Radha O'Meara is a lecturer in screenwriting in the School of Culture and Communication at the University of Melbourne, Australia. Her research combines practice in creative writing with critical research into screen cultures, screen industries and screen aesthetics. Radha's recent research focuses on practices, values and formations of media authorship. She has published journal articles and book chapters on narrative and storytelling in soap operas, superheroes and cat videos.

Sarah Renger studied German literature, education, film, television and media studies in Berlin, Mainz, Potsdam-Babelsberg and Los Angeles. In 2020, she received her doctorate from the University of Leicester, UK, with her dissertation "The Poetics of German Transmedia Storytelling and World-building". She has been a lecturer at the Film University Babelsberg KONRAD WOLF, Germany, since 2014. Since 2010 Sarah has been a writer and director for transmedia series and documentaries. She also works as a media educationist in schools.

Jeff Rush is an associate professor of the Department of Film and Media Arts at Temple University. He is the co-author of Alternative Scriptwriting, whose fifth edition was published in 2013. He has written extensively on screenwriting, literature, video games, narrative theory and philosophy of metaphor, including most recently the chapter, "Doubled Ethics and Narrative Progression in The Wire" for Ethics in Screenwriting: New Perspectives, (Palgrave Macmillan, 2016). He is on the editorial boards of the Journal of Film and Video, the Journal of Screenwriting and Games and Culture. He is currently finishing the paper "Reconstructing the Uncertain Past: Cracked Docudramas that Question Their Own Authority" and a chapter "Contrapuntal Screenwriting: Embracing Paradox" for the Palgrave Handbook of Screenwriting Studies due out in 2022.

River Seager is a Ph.D. student at the University of Dundee, where they have been awarded funding from the Scottish Graduate School of Arts and Humanities to pursue this work. Their thesis, “Knights in Tarnished Armor: Masculinity in the literature and screenplays of Alan Sharp” explores themes of gender throughout Sharp’s canon. Their research interests include screenwriting studies, Scottish Modernism, transmedial analysis and the interaction between Scottish and American creative industries.

Rakesh Sengupta is a Ph.D. candidate in South Asian Studies at the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London. His doctoral project on early screenwriting practices in Indian cinema is an interdisciplinary engagement with film history, media ethnography, print culture and critical theory. Rakesh’s research article in BioScope was awarded the Best Journal Article by Screenwriting Research Network and also received High Commendation for Screen’s Annette Kuhn Debut Essay Prize. His research and writing have also been published in Theory, Culture & Society, Literature/Film Quarterly, The Wire and Indian Cultural Forum.

Siri Senje is a professor of dramatic writing, currently heading the Scriptwriting Program at Westerdals, Kristiania University College. She has written for theatre, film and television and practiced extensively as a stage director at Norwegian residential theatres. Siri has taught dramaturgy, screenwriting and acting at several higher education institutions in Norway for more than 20 years. In 2020 she was awarded the title “Educator of Merit” by a cross-institutional academic committee. She has also worked broadly as a script consultant, including three terms as “gatekeeper” at the Norwegian Film Institute and a residency as dramaturg at the Norwegian Centre for Playwriting in Oslo. Her current research interests are within the field of script development and creative processes/methods. Siri holds an MFA in stage directing from University of Minnesota and a practice-based Doctorate in screenwriting from the Norwegian Film School.

Marianne Strand is a scriptwriter, filmmaker, project leader and coach, and she lives in Harads, Northern Sweden. She writes for film, television and radio and directs short films. Together with Charlotta Lennartsdotter she drives the platform Krumelur, a vehicle for producing and screening children’s films. After releasing the short film Snakereins (2017) they directed the Sami documentary series Before and now with Elli-Karin (2020) for SVT. Another of Marianne’s fields of interest is using film as a resource for existential health. In the project Restorative Film (2013–2017) she collaborated with film and health care researchers, investigating the impact of moving images of nature in various health care environments. Marianne is also the author of the novel The experimental animal (2011) and the artbook Unfilmatized (2016).

Christina Svens is an associate professor in literature—drama, theatre, film and senior lecturer at the School of Culture and Education, Södertörn University, Stockholm. Her research uses intersectional/intercultural perspectives and takes interest in creative processes in artistic work and specifically how questions of equality are performed. Her thesis Direction with a Feminist Overtone (2002) is about the film and theatre director Suzanne Osten's work at Stockholm City Theatre. In 2015 she published the grant winning The Stranger on the Stage about Swedish-Kurdish actor's performance work in Sweden. Christina contributed to the artbook Unfilmatized (2016), as well as to Cross-Cultural Interviewing: Feminist experiences and reflections (2016), Performance, Feminism, and Affect in Neoliberal Times (2017) and Cultural meetings (2020).

Stayci Taylor is a Senior Lecturer and Program Manager (2020–22) with the Master of Media at RMIT University. Her research (critical and creative works) on screenwriting, gender, comedy, web series, scriptwriting-as-research and nonfiction has appeared in Journal of Screenwriting, New Writing, TEXT, Celebrity Studies and Studies in Australasian Cinema among others. Her Ph.D. by project (screenplay) won an award for research excellence (2017). She is the co-editor of the books Script Development: Critical Approaches, Creative Practices, International Perspectives (2021), The Bloomsbury A-Z of Creative Writing Methods (2022) and TV Transformations and Female Transgression: From Prisoner Cell Block H to Wentworth (2022). Stayci brings to her research a background in writing for television in New Zealand and Australia. Her credits include a bi-lingual soap, a sketch comedy series and a primetime sitcom.

Claus Tieber is the former Chair of the Screenwriting Research Network, and a lecturer at the University of Vienna. He is the principal investigator of several research projects, including his “Habilitation”, about the history of the American screenplay (Schreiben für Hollywood. Das Drehbuch im Studiosystem, 2008). Claus has also published on storytelling in silent cinema (Stumm-filmdramaturgie. Erzählweisen des amerikanischen Feature Films 1917–1927, 2011), Hindi cinema and film music.

Romana Turina is Head of Subject (Screenwriting), and Senior Lecturer at the Arts University Bournemouth. She holds a Ph.D. in Theatre, Film, and Television from the University of York, UK. She is currently working on the translation of cultural geographies, memory, history and archaeology in audience-friendly outputs. Examples of her research on film are the essay films Lunch with Family (2016), nominated for the UK's Art and Humanities Research Council Awards, and San Sabba (2016), a finalist at the Hollywood International Independent Documentary Awards.

Anthony Twarog is a Ph.D. Candidate in the Department of Communication Arts at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, where he is writing a dissertation on the consumer screenwriting industry. He received a B.F.A. in Dramatic Writing from New York University and an M.A. in Critical Studies from the University of Southern California. After completing his M.A., he worked as a coordinator in the entertainment industry in Los Angeles before returning to academia.

Simon Weaving is a senior lecturer at the University of Newcastle, Australia, where he teaches screenwriting and media production in the School of Creative Industries. A writer and filmmaker, Weaving has written and directed several award-winning short films and the feature film The Competition (2012). He was Director of the Canberra International Film Festival from 2009–2012, and the founding Director of the Stronger Than Fiction Documentary Film Festival.

LIST OF FIGURES

The Feedback Phenomenon: Dealing with Multiple Voices in the Development of Original Screenplays

Fig. 1	Overview, in retrospect, of the Westerdals project in Script Development Research	11
Fig. 2	The timeline of the Westerdals Project in Script Development	18
Fig. 3	Original impulses and their emotional charge	20
Fig. 4	The distance from the Original Impulse to the Screen Idea	21
Fig. 5	Feedback giver profile analysis	27
Fig. 6	Two types of feedback approach/method	27
Fig. 7	Types of feedback content	28
Fig. 8	Feedback types of which to be especially aware	29

Script Readers as Gatekeepers: Demystifying Processes of Script Coverage

Fig. 1	Coverage Top Sheet © James Napoli	35
--------	-----------------------------------	----

Script Development on Unscripted Television: Grand Designs and the Spectacle of the Reveal

Fig. 1	The triangulation of factors working in synergy throughout the script development process in factual television: the production team, the presenter and the format	73
Fig. 2	What is unscripted television? University television production students' word cloud, University of Greenwich (2018)	73
Fig. 3	Example of a factual television post-production script	78

Scripting the Experimental Documentary Film: Developing the “Script” for *Not Reconciled

Fig. 1	The ruined medieval town of Belchite	107
--------	--------------------------------------	-----

Fig. 2	The Fire at Casas Rusas/Russian Houses	112
Fig. 3	The Girl in Red	113

The Relational Language of First Nations Cultural Sensibilities, Principles and Storytelling Ethics as an Intercultural Approach to Script Development

Fig. 1	Bessy in a screen capture from No Longer a Wandering Spirit—Imaginaries of Bessy Flowers , 2016 © Sharon Huebner	232
Fig. 2	Ezzard Flowers in a screen capture from No Longer a Wandering Spirit—Imaginaries of Bessy Flowers , 2016 © Sharon Huebner	236
Fig. 3	The late Russell Nelly (far left) and Bessy's descendant families in a screen capture from No Longer a Wandering Spirit—Imaginaries of Bessy Flowers , 2016 © Sharon Huebner	240
Fig. 4	Bessy's Bryant family (left to right), Regina Wilkinson, Betty Hood, Flo Hood, Phyllis Andy and Amy Hood in a screen capture from No Longer a Wandering Spirit—Imaginaries of Bessy Flowers , 2016 © Sharon Huebner	243

The Application of an 'Eternal Dance' Methodology in the Development of an Original Screenplay

Fig. 1	'All is "Doing"': representation of the creative practice involved in developing a screen idea into a screenplay. Reproduced with permission (© Rose Ferrell 2020)	409
Fig. 2	Examples of dance notation. 'La Dance' (Feuillet, 1709) From Recueil de dances by Raoul-Auger Feuillet, 1709, https://www.loc.gov/item/14002126/	412
Fig. 3	Examples of dance notation. 'The Tango Square' (Newman, 1914) From Dances of To-Day by Albert W. Newman, 1914, https://www.loc.gov/item/14009840/	412
Fig. 4	Examples of dance notation. Pastoral (Isaac, 1713), From Mr. Issac's new dance made for Her Majesty's birthday by Mr. Isaac, https://www.loc.gov/item/98160741/	413
Fig. 5	An example of the eternal dance methodology showing its most prominent features. Reproduced with permission (© Rose Ferrell 2019)	414
Fig. 6	(table). The codes and conventions of the eternal dance methodology. Reproduced with permission (© Rose Ferrell 2020)	415
Fig. 7	Sketch of the first ten pages of the feature film screenplay 'Calico Dreams' drawn as a 'dramatic chain' using the eternal dance methodology. Reproduced with permission (© Rose Ferrell 2019)	417
Fig. 8	Reproduction of dramatic chain from Fig. 7 in electronic form. The methodology was used here to interrogate character interactions and point of view. Reproduced with permission (© Rose Ferrell 2019)	418

Crafting Immersive Experiences: A Case Study of the Development of Three Short Narrative Cinematic Virtual Reality (CVR) Projects

- |        |  |     |
|--------|--|-----|
| Fig. 1 | The colour-coded key to the screenplay for Checkpoint (2019) (Courtesy of Mel White)      | 509 |
| Fig. 2 | The opening page of the screenplay for Checkpoint (2019), Draft 1 (Courtesy of Mel White) | 510 |

Violet City*: Script Development from Novel to Green Screen Fantasy Feature

- |        |   |     |
|--------|---|-----|
| Fig. 1 | Violet City (2016), courtesy of John Maxwell and Dave Jackson              | 589 |
| Fig. 2 | Opening shot (2016), courtesy of John Maxwell and Dave Jackson                    | 591 |
| Fig. 3 | Lord Splaine and Lady Ezcargoza (2016), courtesy of John Maxwell and Dave Jackson | 594 |
| Fig. 4 | Empusa over Violet City (2016) courtesy of John Maxwell and Dave Jackson   | 595 |

LIST OF TABLES

A Comparative Study of the Novel O Quatrilho and its Adapted Screenplays: Researching the Script Development Process

Table 1	Protocol for a comparative analysis of the novel and adapted screenplay	365
Table 2	Comparison between the novel O Quatrilho and the script adapted by Antonio Calmon showing the moment when the protagonists, Pierina and Massimo, are cited for the first time in each text	366

Introduction

Stayci Taylor and Craig Batty

When we put out the call for book chapters on the topic of script development in July 2017, little did we know that four years later we would be publishing the second of two books—one that, as you will have noticed, contains 40 chapters. This volume follows our first edited collection arising from this call, Script Development: Critical Approaches, Creative Practices, International Perspectives (2021). Back in 2016, when we started to drive a research agenda on the topic of script development—with colleagues Louise Sawtell and Bridget Conon, and subsequently also Philippa Burne, Glenda Hambly, Hester Joyce (see Chapter 29), Marilyn Leder, Noel Maloney, Radha O’Meara (see Chapter 8) and Mark Poole—we knew that there was a scholarly gap, and we were keen to address this gap through strategic collaboration and publishing. While a few publications explicitly interrogating the topic of script development had already emerged (see, for just one example, Taylor & Batty, 2016), the first official output from this formalised endeavour was a special issue of the Journal of Screenwriting in 2017, which began to lay the foundations for research in this area of screenwriting studies. Two books and over 60 chapters and journal

---

S. Taylor (✉)
RMIT University, Melbourne, Australia
e-mail: stayci.taylor@rmit.edu.au

C. Batty
University of South Australia, Adelaide, Australia
e-mail: craig.batty@unisa.edu.au articles later, we can probably no longer say that script development is an ‘emerging area’.

Reflecting on our initial call for book chapters, which generated so much interest that we produced two edited collections, it is interesting to see what we foregrounded as important and in need of scholarly attention. For example, we wrote in the call that ‘this collection is intended to explore singular instances of script development ‘in action’ across various countries and cultures’—and, indeed, this collection features contributors from around the world reflecting on their own experiences of participating in and researching script development, across geographical, historical, cultural and political contexts. We also flagged our interest ‘in both mainstream and niche practices across all forms of screen media [to] present a rich and diverse set of analyses of script development’ to help us understand ‘what it is, what it looks like, and how it is being approached in various personal, industrial and geographic contexts’. Thanks to the contributions of our authors, this goal has been achieved, with some distinctive and arguably world-first case studies and scholarship in the field.

Looking at the two collections, the first, Script Development, is in many ways an extension of the special issue of the Journal of Screenwriting. While it has case studies and specific contexts (e.g. how Denmark and Australia compare in their discourses on script development; how two Ph.D. candidates innovated development practices to address their research needs; how notions of quality and betterment appear in script development discourse), it very much provides further theorisation about how we might understand the practices of script development—useful, we hope, in continuing to provide scholarly foundations for further work in the area. What this, The Palgrave Handbook of Script Development, offers is a much more diverse, eclectic and ‘lived’ account of script development.

Across the book’s 40 chapters, which take us inside the writers’ room, alongside the script editor, between development conversations, and outside the mainstream and into the experimental, we learn about policies, practices, collaborations, breakdowns, creative interventions, critical explanations and emotional responses to script development. With authors spanning upwards of 15 countries, and who have inhabited an array of roles—including writer, script editor, producer, script consultant and executive, this is a truly international perspective on how script development functions (or otherwise) across media and platforms. Topics range from script readers and script reporting to feedback and collaboration, to gender, diversity and ethical representation and to specific national and cultural contexts. Form, format and mediums of focus include (as we would expect) narrative film and television, but also web series, video games, cinematic virtual reality, documentary and factual programming, transmedia and animation. Among the chapters focussing on original scripts and screenplays are analyses of adaptation including case studies of a Brazilian novel, a Czech opera and an Australian YA novella. Many of our authors’ sites of analysis go beyond specific media and into such contexts as the classroom and script development services.

Comprising four parts, our handbook guides readers through the many and varied processes of script development, from the perspectives of creators of original works to consultative roles and to international perspectives, alternative approaches and specific and contextual case studies. Chapters represent key challenges, roles and cultures of script development, adding new knowledge about, and insights into, this process.

In Part, our contributors take us ‘behind the scenes’, exploring how script development is being enacted, and how it is experienced, by those for whom this process is part of their professional, pedagogical or research practice. The chapters in this section ask questions about, and provide examples from, creators and writers of original screenplays, as well as revealing insights from those in other script developmental roles—script doctors, consultants, funding agencies, showrunners and those teaching in screenwriting training facilities. The authors in this section contribute to reflections upon, and interrogations of, roles and responsibilities, navigating development and deploying interventions across modes, forms, budgets and audiences.

In Part: Script Development in Time and Place, the chapters pull into sharp relief the historical, social, temporal and geographical specificities of developing screen stories, and challenge notions of ‘universal’ approaches to script development. Through case studies and interviews, the authors span decades, continents and applications to offer unique perspectives on a wide range of script development processes.

Part explores Alternative Approaches, whereby scholars, teachers and practitioners offer a range of approaches to script development that may be considered outside of the mainstream or that challenge dominant practices. The range of chapters in this section includes both case studies and reflections, offering new methodologies, experiments, multi-modalities and perspectives on script development innovation.

In the final section, Part, we explore some of the Unique Contexts of Script Development, discussing a range of novel challenges and specific contexts over various sites, roles and responsibilities of script development. Some of these chapters look at some of script development’s social factors, and through reflection, case study and interview explore a range of considerations, dynamics and challenges including issues of communication, notions of gate-keeping and quests for greater diversity of perspective. Others focus on specific sites of practice, uncovering unique insights into script development for children’s drama, transmedia narratives, green screen fantasy, the Hollywood studio system, animation and modal migrations.

To look at this book now, five years after setting out on a programme of research to celebrate and encourage further scholarship on script development, encourages us to assess how far we have come and what is yet to be achieved. The chapters in this book tell their own story and that the term ‘script development’ warrants its own handbook also speaks for itself, even while some of the scholarship grapples with, or even contests, the definition (see Batty et al., 2018; Price, 2017). In this introduction, we go briefly to where all of this has landed in terms of questions, debates and research endeavours. We propose that in inviting scholars to home in on script development, we uncover aspects of screenwriting and screen production that might otherwise be overlooked, or covered more generally, in screen studies scholarship or even, arguably, in screenwriting practice/screen production research analyses. The areas of focus we raised with our colleagues in the article, 'Script Development: Defining the Field' (Batty et al., 2017) included questions we can use as a roadmap by which to further reflect.

Some of those questions were along the lines 'why' and 'where' people look do develop scripts. Here and elsewhere over the past five years, researchers have used interviews, discourse analysis, ethnography and reflective practice to unpack motives for, and subsequent experiences of, commitment to script development. And while the chapters in the handbook detail many of the contexts in which script development happens (as summarised above), our contributors go further to provide in-depth analyses of 'how' scripts are developed. They do this by showing us the methods enacted 'behind the scenes' of mainstream film and television script development (including Bevan-Mogg, Krauß, Macneill, Moore, C., Taylor and Batty), sharing their own—or analysing other's—innovative processes (including Black and Dzenis, Daniels, Gay, Gist, Huebner and Flowers, Ferrell, Milligan, Strand and Svens and Turina), building case studies of the script development behind historical and/or landmark screen works (Benis, Joyce and Jontef, Miranda, Seager and Tieber) or tracking the process of becoming 'green lit' (Leal). Our authors also provide granular studies on some of the roles, stages, impacts and institutions of script development such as the showrunner (O'Meara and Moore), the table read (Cake), script development services such as The Black List (Twarog) and the political economy of script development (Sengupta). Others (Ianniello and Ianniello, Kelly, Senje and Weaving) take us into dedicated sites of script development—labs, pods and screenwriting courses—to give us a perspective on how script development is practiced outside of the 'factory line' of mainstream screen production. We also blur the boundaries of fiction and nonfiction script development with an account of using documentary methods to develop an adapted screenplay (Landers), and an analysis of script development for factual programming using fictional frameworks (Brown).

Other questions posed by the 2017 article—around the role of the script 'expert', the possibilities for script development in the academic context and the influence of format and media on the practice—are equally instructive in establishing how our authors have contributed new scholarship to the field. In this collection, for example, the role of the script 'expert' is interrogated in chapters based on interviews with writers, script editors and development executives, but also in others with more dedicated foci, such as the script reader as gatekeeper (Napoli) and the cross-cultural script consultant (Rush). When raising questions around media and format, we had suggested in our journal's special issue that a comparative study of script development practices across media—film, television, animation, games, web series and so on—could illuminate similarities and differences. Four years on, most work still centres around more traditional film and television. Therefore, we are happy to include in the collection chapters focussed on (and troubling notions of) script development in 'web series' (Gee), cinematic virtual reality (Dooley), green screen (Jackson), video games (Di Crosta), transmedia content development (Renger), the multi-modal screenplay (Moore, D.) and animated opera (Kolokytha), while also acknowledging we have only crested the wave of multimedia possibilities. Further research might also bear in mind Steven Price's (2017) thoughts about the intersection of script development scholarship and adaptation studies, specifically the potential of practitioner engagement to 're-energize that field [adaptation] just as it has with research into the screenplay' (p. 328). While inside the collection are wide-ranging analyses of script development processes for adapted screenplays as previously highlighted, only two are from an 'insider's' perspective, which might suggest a gap in practitioner-led analyses of adapted scripts and screenplays.

Researchers drawing on the theoretical resources of sociology, cultural studies and critical policy perspectives have begun to develop an evidence based focus on asymmetrical 'access' to script development, and how broader structural and social inequalities impact upon script development practices and spaces. There is no doubt that there is scope, and need, for a lot more work here, particularly longitudinal studies of these contexts. This feels like a natural progression of the work undertaken to date, especially of the case studies offered in this book covering script development under considerations including Indigeneity and mental health (Hopgood, Huebner and Flowers and Milligan).

Screenwriting in the academy is arguably an area in which Australia has already taken a lead, specifically looking at the screenwriting doctorate, in part because of the sheer number of research degree students enrolled in practice-based work (i.e., the creative Ph.D.). While this is a niche area of script development studies, Australia provides a case in point that many established writers and script development personnel are undertaking Ph.D.s, expanding their practice through research. Whether and to what extent this informs industry practice beyond the Ph.D. is still to be determined, but in the context of increasingly conservative industries less willing to take creative risks, university research spaces might well be becoming incubators for innovation in script development. While this Handbook looks more into industry than it does to the academy, it is important in such a collection to highlight the research from those who, at the time of writing, are Ph.D. candidates (Gist, Ianniello, M., Leal, Milligan, Moore, D., Seager, Sengupta and Twarog).

The summaries of our authors' research detailed in the paragraphs above are by no means exhaustive, as many of our authors' chapters address some, or all, of the questions and categories by which we have framed our assessment