

The Palgrave Handbook of Language Policies in Africa

Edited by

Esther Mukewa Lianza · Leonard Muaka

palgrave
macmillan

The Palgrave Handbook of Language Policies in Africa

Esther Mukewa Lisanza • Leonard Muaka
Editors

The Palgrave Handbook of Language Policies in Africa

palgrave
macmillan

Editors

Esther Mukewa Lisanza
Department of African Studies
Howard University
Washington, DC, USA

Leonard Muaka
Department of World Languages & Cultures
Howard University
Washington, DC, USA

ISBN 978-3-031-57307-1      ISBN 978-3-031-57308-8 (eBook)
<https://doi.org/10.1007/978-3-031-57308-8>

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s), under exclusive licence to Springer Nature Switzerland AG 2024
This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, expressed or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

This Palgrave Macmillan imprint is published by the registered company Springer Nature Switzerland AG.
The registered company address is: Gewerbestrasse 11, 6330 Cham, Switzerland

Paper in this product is recyclable.

We dedicate this volume to the custodians of African indigenous languages and the young generation in whose hands lies the future of African indigenous languages.

Acknowledgement

As co-editors and contributors of this volume on Language Policies in Africa, we greatly benefitted from the enormous help we received from different people. Although we cannot list all their names here, we wish to thank all our informants who were more than happy to share their views, opinions, observations, and rich knowledge about language policies and practices in many countries in Africa. We are forever grateful. Also, we are thankful to the following individuals for their advice and support throughout the entire process of writing this manuscript:

Lang Fafa Dampha—African Academy of Languages (ACALAN)
Caroline Asimwe—The East African Kiswahili Commission (EAKC)
Sinfree Makoni—Penn State University
Nancy Kula—University of Essex
James Michira—Hankuk University
Beata Wójtowicz—University of Warsaw

Contents

1	Introduction	1
	Esther Mukewa Lisanza and Leonard Muaka
Part I	Language Policies in East Africa	5
2	A Historical Perspective of the Language Policy in Kenya	7
	Jane Akinyi Ngala Oduor and Shadrack Kipsang
3	Language Policy in Tanzania Mainland	37
	Dainess Mashiku Maganda
4	Persistent Struggle of Kiswahili Versus English in Zanzibar's Language Policy	71
	Haroun Ayoub Maalim
5	Language Policy in Uganda	85
	Ruth G. Mukama
Part II	Language Policies in Central Africa	111
6	Language Policy in Burundi	113
	Leonard Muaka, Anitha Nduwamahoro, and Dieudonné Butoyi

7	Rwanda's Language Policy from the Past to the Present Day	131
	Pascal Gabutu
8	The Ideological Underpinnings of Language Policy in D.R. Congo	149
	Eyamba G. Bokamba
9	Language Policy in Congo-Brazzaville	179
	Jean Mathieu Tsoumou
Part III Language Policies in West Africa		195
10	Language Policy in Cabo Verde	197
	Abel Djassi Amado
11	Language Policy in a Quandary: The Case of Cameroon	219
	Lenzemo Constantine Yuka
12	Language Policy in Senegal: History and Current Trends	243
	Mamaramé Seck
13	Language Policy of the Gambia	263
	Burama L. J. Jammeh
14	Language Policy and Plurilingualism in Côte d'Ivoire	285
	Jean-Claude Dodo and Jacques Denos N'ZI Yao
15	Language Policy in Benin and Rights to Education in Local Mother Tongues	301
	Désiré Baloubi
16	Language Policies in Mali	321
	Amadou Beidy Sow
17	Language Policy in Nigeria	345
	Harrison Adeniyi and Ayo Ayodele
18	Linguistic Policy and Practices in Niger	369
	Moussa Mohamed Sagayar

19	Diachronic View of the Language Policy in Togo	385
	Palakyem Mouzou
20	Linguistic Policy in Burkina Faso	405
	Cheick Félix Bobodo Ouédraogo
21	Languages in Ghana: On the Need and Search for a Policy	437
	Seth Antwi Ofori
Part IV	Language Policies in the Horn of Africa	463
22	Language Policies and Practices in Eritrea	465
	Yonas Mesfun Asfaha and Sjaak Kroon
23	Language Policy, Politics, and Ethnic Federalism in Ethiopia: Looking Beyond Pedagogical and Linguistic Objectives	489
	Belay Worku Alem
24	Language Policy in Somaliland and Somalia	511
	Maryan Ali
Part V	Language Policies in North Africa	525
25	Language Policy During Both Colonial and Post-colonial Eras in Morocco: Aspects of a Double Marginalization of Imazighen	527
	Ali Alalou
26	Linguistic Policies in Algeria: Historical Landmarks and Sociolinguistic Implications	553
	Souheila Hedid
27	The Survival of Franco-Arab Colonization in Chad: The Gordian Knot of Linguistic Policies	575
	Dionnodji Tchaine

Part VI	Language Policies in Southern Africa	593
28	Language Planning and Policy in Zimbabwe: Past and Present Eventhough Ndlovu	595
29	The Impact of the Lesotho Language Policies on Indigenous and Former Colonial Languages Usage in Public Domains in Lesotho Kelello Alicia Rakolobe	625
30	Language Policy in Namibia: An Outlook from a Pre-colonial to Post-independence Era Beausedtha J. Bruwer	645
31	Critical Insights into Language Policy and Planning in Zambia Gabriel Simungala	665
32	Languages and Policy in Botswana Anderson Chebanne and Kemmony Collete Monaka	683
33	Language Policy and the Struggle for Linguistic Equality in South Africa Bongeka Buhleba Mashasha Hlengwa-Selepe	701
34	Conclusion Leonard Muaka and Esther Mukewa Lisanza	733
Index		741

Notes on Contributors

Harrison Adeniyi, PhD, FLAN, MNAL is Professor of African Linguistics in the Department of Linguistics, African Languages and Communication Arts, Faculty of Arts, Lagos State University. His primary areas of research interest are phonology/morphology and their interface, language endangerment and maintenance, foreign/second language acquisition and teaching methodologies. He is widely published in these areas working with English, Edo, and Yoruba language. His recent works are Olomu, O.O. & Adeniyi H. R. (2024) “Socio-Linguistics Analysis of Formulaic Expressions in Yoruba Speech Community” In Audu, M.S, Adeniyi, H.R, Gbenga Ibileye and Tosin Olagunju (eds.) Intergroup Relations, Strategic and Security Studies: The Future of Higher Education in Africa: Festschrift for Olayemi Akinwumi and Adeniyi, H. R et al (2023) Listening for Religion in Lagos: Preliminary Reflections, Journal of African Cultural Studies, www.tandfonline. He is a member of the Nigerian Academy of Letters and a fellow of the Linguistic Association of Nigeria. He is currently the chairman of the Technical committee of the National Language Policy for Nigeria.

Ali Alalou is Associate Professor of French and Applied Linguistics at the University of Delaware, Newark, USA. His articles appear in various professional and peer reviewed journals such as the ACTFL Foreign Language Annals, Current Issues in Language Planning, The French Review, Languages and Linguistics, Awal, etc. He is the author of a grammar book on Tamazight and has co-authored with Ms. Elizabeth Letts a children’s book titled The Butter Man, which received several Awards including NCSS Notable Social Studies Trade Books for Young People 2009, Geography/People/Places. In addition, he has co-edited a two-volume anthology titled: Lamalif: A Critical Anthology of Societal Debates in Morocco During the “Years of Lead” (1966–1988) (Volume 1) and Lamalif: A Critical Anthology of Societal Debates in Morocco During the “Years of Lead” (1966–1988) (Volume 2).

Belay Worku Alem is a PhD candidate in the Department of Anthology at the University of Florida. He received his LL.B. in Law and LL.M. in Business and Corporate Law from Bahir Dar University School of Law, Ethiopia. Before joining University of Florida, he was serving as Lecturer in Law and executive director for administrative affairs at Bahir Dar University.

Maryan Ali is Lecturer in Somali language at Howard University with nearly 20 years of experience in educational settings with both public and private schools. She holds a BA in Computer Information Systems, M.Ed. in Career Technical Education.

Abel Djassi Amado is Associate Professor of Political Science and International Relations at Simmons University. He holds a PhD in Political Science/African Studies from Boston University. He researches on the politics of language in West Africa/Cabo Verde, Amílcar Cabral, and the political history of national liberation in Africa. His works have been published in Lusotopie, The Journal of Cape Verdean Studies, Desafios, and Portuguese Literary and Cultural Studies. His book Creole Language, Democracy, and the Illegible State in Cabo Verde was published in 2023. He is currently the president of the Cabo Verdean Center for Applied Research, a Boston-based think tank that advances Cabo Verdean studies.

Yonas Mesfun Asfaha is an associate professor at Asmara College of Education in Asmara, Eritrea. He obtained his PhD on literacy acquisition in multilingual Eritrea at Tilburg University, The Netherlands, in 2009. His research interests are in the field of language diversity, language education, and language policy. He is the editor of the Journal of Eritrean Studies.

Ayo Ayodele is a professor in the Department of English at Lagos State University, Nigeria. He holds a PhD in English from the University of Ibadan, Nigeria. His research and publications center on discourse and text processing, language of politics, literacy and human development, language policy in Nigeria, and indigenous knowledge in interactional practices. He recently published a monograph, Beyond Linguistic Injuries: The Logogenesis of Hate Discourses in Nigeria (2021), and his latest published article is “Critical Text Processing: A Tool for Sustainable Governance,” Journal of the Reading Association of Nigeria (2023).

Désiré Baloubi is Full Professor of English and Linguistics. He obtained his BA and MA in English and Spanish from the Republic of Benin University Teachers College; MA in Applied Linguistics from the University of Durham-England; and PhD, English/Applied Linguistics and MS Information and Communication Science from Ball State University, USA. Dr. Baloubi is currently a senior professor at Norfolk State University, with 20+ years of Higher Education teaching including 10 years of leadership experience as Department Head (From Shaw University to Norfolk State). His academic and professional fields of interest are language and culture, human communication, morpho-phonology, functional grammar, pragmatics, teacher training, and faculty development.

Eyamba G. Bokamba is Professor Emeritus of Linguistics and African languages at the University of Illinois at Urbana from where he retired recently after over four decades of service. He holds a PhD in theoretical linguistics, with specialization in Bantu syntax, from Indiana University, Bloomington. His research and teaching interests include the syntax of Bantu languages, sociolinguistics, and language acquisition with particular reference to African language teaching and learning. His sociolinguistics research addresses various aspects of multilingualism, including language planning and policies in public domains in Africa, language spread and variation, code-switching, and varieties of African English. His syntactic work focuses on core Bantu grammar phenomena such as question formation, grammatical agreement, relative clause formation, topicalization, and recently, complementation. Applied areas of interest include forensic linguistics, translation, and conference interpretation involving primarily English, French, and Lingála.

Beausetha J. Bruwer is an instructor of inclusive education, deaf education, and sign language at the University of Namibia. She holds a PhD in Sign Language. As part of her doctoral studies, she investigated the best practices to teach deaf learners using the Bilingual-Bicultural Literacy approach—a position that the Namibian education authorities have endorsed as policy. Her key areas of research interest include among other things: language education, early literacy and language acquisition/development for deaf learners, sign language linguistics and practices, deaf culture, mother tongue education, multilingual education, early childhood inclusive practices, play pedagogy, outdoor pedagogy, and teacher preparation for inclusive practices.

Dieudonné Butoyi is an assistant lecturer in the Department of African Languages and Cultures, Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences at the University of Burundi since 2012 where he teaches African languages and linguistics. His main area of research is Kiswahili linguistics. He holds a master's degree in Kiswahili from The Open University of Tanzania in 2022. He is among the researchers who worked on Capacity Assessment of the Development and Use of Kiswahili in the EAC (2019) under the East African Commission of Kiswahili, and in 2022, he contributed to the "Stratégies pour un aménagement linguistique cohérent au Burundi" (Strategies for coherent linguistic planning in Burundi) edited by CRELACS, University of Burundi. He is working on his PhD-Kiswahili at The Open University of Tanzania.

Andy Chebanne is Professor in Languages and Linguistics in the Faculty of Humanities and Education at the University of Botswana. He was educated in France where he obtained a doctorate in language sciences. He worked for the Centre for Advanced Studies of African Society as a deputy director where he led a program for the promotion of African languages research and orthography development. His current research shows a keen interest in language policy, literacy in African languages, and general linguistics in African languages, especially the marginalized Khoisan languages.

Jean-Claude Dodo is a teacher-researcher, assistant master in the Department of Language Sciences at Félix Houphouët-Boigny University, Cocody-Abidjan. He is the Deputy Administrative Secretary of the Dynamic Language and Discourse Laboratory (LADYLAD) of the UFR LLC. Furthermore, he is the interface-referent of the TSANGA team (Transmission of Knowledge, Digital Appropriations of African Generations) on behalf of Ivory Coast. He holds a doctorate in sociolinguistics. His main areas of research are sociolinguistics (urban), variation of French, phonetics, phonology, morphology, digital culture, lexicology, and documentation of languages (in danger) of Ivory Coast. He is the author and co-author of around 40 articles.

Pascal Gahutu is Linguistics Lecturer at Daystar University in Kenya. He holds a PhD in Descriptive Linguistics from Kenyatta University. He does research in Applied linguistics and translation.

Souheila Hedid holds a PhD in language sciences. She is a teacher-researcher at the Frères Mentouri-Constantine 1 University in Algeria. She is a specialist in language sciences and has been conducting field studies on the sociolinguistic situation in urban spaces for several years. She has carried out several research studies on urban dialects and youth dialects.

Bongeka BuhlebaMashasha Hlengwa-Selepe is Lecturer in IsiZulu at Indiana University's Hamilton Lugar School of Global and International Studies. Additionally, she holds a position as a research associate at the University of the Witwatersrand. She holds a PhD in Translation. Her doctoral research explored the dynamics of language policy implementation in South Africa. Prior to her tenure at Indiana University, she was a lecturer at the University of Johannesburg and the University of the Witwatersrand, where she taught applied linguistics, translation studies, and language.

Burama L. J. Jammeh is an education researcher and consultant. He is the former director of Curriculum Research, Evaluation, and Development Directorate in the Ministry of Basic and Secondary Education in The Gambia where he doubled as the focal person for African Academy of Languages (ACALAN). He does research and consultancy capacity building at the Management Development Institute (MDI) in The Gambia. He is the chairman of Scientific Committee of The Gambia Chapter, Educational Research Network for West and Central Africa (ERNWACA). He is also a member of the Ministerial Advisory Committee in the Ministry of Higher Education Research, Science and Technology in The Gambia.

Shadrack Kipsang graduated with bachelor's and master's degrees in Linguistics from the University of Nairobi, Kenya. As a Fulbright Language Teaching Assistant, he taught Kiswahili as a second language at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. He currently works as a Swahili translator and interpreter at the Interpreters' Cooperative of Madison, Wisconsin. Besides, he teaches Linguistics and Communication as an adjunct lecturer in the Department of Linguistics and Languages at the University of Nairobi. He is also a graduate student and a teaching assistant in the Department of Linguistics at the University of Iowa, United States. His current research interests include Third Language Acquisition and bilingualism, African pragmatics, metaphors and cognition, language and social media, and psycholinguistic aspects of sentence processing.

Sjaak Kroon is Emeritus Professor of Multilingualism in the Multicultural Society at the Department of Culture Studies of Tilburg University, The Netherlands. His main research interests are in the field of linguistic and cultural diversity, language policy, and language education in the context of globalization and superdiversity.

Esther Mukewa Lisanza is an assistant professor in the Department of African Studies at Howard University. She holds a PhD in Language and Literacy from the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. Her research and publications center on language and literacy development, politics of language in education, language policy in Africa, African education, African indigenous knowledge, and women empowerment in Africa. Her latest edited book is Gender and Education in Kenya (2021).

Haroun Ayoub Maalim is a senior lecturer in the School of Education at the State University of Zanzibar. He obtained his Master of Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages (M-TESOL) from the University of Melbourne, Australia. Then he pursued his PhD in Language and Education at Rhodes University in South Africa, and subsequent Postdoc at the same university. Dr. Maalim teaches postgraduate courses. His current research interests include language policy and planning, and second language teaching and learning. He also has research interests in curriculum planning and language assessment.

Dainess Mashiku Maganda is a senior lecturer in the Franklin College at the University of Georgia. She is the director of African Languages, Literature and Culture Program in the Department of Comparative Literature and Intercultural Studies (CLIS). She holds a PhD in Language and Literacy from the University of South Carolina (USC). She has over 20 publications in books, book chapters, and peer reviewed articles. Her recent book is Africa's Identity Revolution in the 21st Century (2022). Her scholarly works focus on identity issues for people from formerly colonized contexts, language ideologies, and promoting the use of minority languages internationally. She is also a poet with a passion to underscore the beauty of Africa and encourage people to honor and cherish their varied identities.

Kemmony Collete Monaka is an associate professor in the Department of English in the Faculty of Humanities at the University of Botswana. She obtained her doctorate in linguistics in Britain. She has participated in the linguistic and historical documentation of Shekgalagari language varieties. She publishes widely in reputable international journals. She has co-authored a grammar of Shekgalagari. She is currently a linguist-advisor in the Shekgalagari Bible Translation Project.

Palakyem Mouzou is Associate Professor of Linguistics at Université de Kara [Kara University] in Togo. He is currently a Fulbright Visiting Research Scholar at Texas State University. His main areas of research are applied linguistics (terminology, lexicology, semantic variation), language in action (discourse analysis, conversation analysis), and language planning. He is the current General Secretary of an International Network named People, Cultures, Languages and Development (www.poclандe.fr).

Leonard Muaka is an associate professor and chair in the Department of World Languages and Cultures at Howard University. He holds a PhD in linguistics from the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. He has taught in Kenya, Mexico, and USA. His research focuses on youth language, language and identity, political language, language acquisition, and multilingualism.

Ruth G. Mukama is Professor of Linguistics in the Department of African Languages at Kabale University in Uganda. She received her PhD from York University. Before joining Kabale University, she was Professor of Linguistics at Makerere University where she taught English and Swahili courses. Her area of research includes language policy matters, an area in which she has published widely.

Eventhough Ndlovu holds a Doctoral Degree in Linguistics from the University of the Free State, South Africa. He is currently a senior lecturer in the Department of Languages, Literature and Culture at the University of Zimbabwe. He is also a research fellow in the Department of African Languages at the University of the Free State. His research interests are in Language Planning, Policy and Management, Language Rights, Terminography, Lexicography, Editing, Translation and Interpreting and African Literature. He has a substantial number of publications in the aforementioned areas.

Anitha Nduwamahoro is an assistant lecturer at the University of Burundi, Institute of Applied Pedagogy, Department of Kirundi-Kiswahili where she teaches Kiswahili and Translation courses. She has a master's degree in Transborder Languages and Intercultural Communication: Kiswahili option obtained at The Pan African University and The University of Buea, Cameroon. She is currently doing her PhD-Kiswahili at The Open University of Tanzania in Dar-Es-Salaam. Her research interests are in Applied Linguistics where she focuses on language assessment, curriculum development, and research on African languages and linguistics in general. She is also a freelance translator (Kirundi-French-Kiswahili-English and vice versa) and an intercultural communicator.

Jacques Denos N'Zi Yao holds a PhD in Sociolinguistics from the Félix Houphouët-Boigny University, Ivory Coast. He is currently a lecturer in French-speaking techniques at the Félix Houphouët-Boigny National Polytechnic Institute (INP-HB) in Yamoussoukro, Ivory Coast. His research activities focus on language practices in cinematographic and audiovisual works, language policies, French spoken in Ivory Coast and Ivorian languages, conversational analysis, linguistic variation, etc. He is the author of several publications, including (1) Le français de Côte d'Ivoire dans le téléfilm "Ma famille" de Loukou Akissi Delphine (Akissi Delta): spécificités, motivations et enjeux (2020 a), (2) Plaidoyer pour la prise en compte des langues d'immigration dans les programmes bilingues en Côte d'Ivoire (2020 b), (3) Les langues ivoiriennes dans les œuvres filmiques: entre pratiques et représentations (2019), etc.

Jane Akinyi Ngala Oduor is Associate Professor of Phonology in the Department of Linguistics and Languages at the University of Nairobi and the coordinator of Korean Studies Programme. She is also an ELDP trained language documenter. She documented the Okiek language of Kenya through an ELDP grant. Her research interests are in the sound systems of languages in Kenya and the teaching of pronunciation in Kenyan schools. She is also very interested in African sociolinguistics especially multilingualism. Apart from these, her current research is on African pragmatics, reading and improving the quality of secondary school teachers of English in Kenya.

Seth Antwi Ofori is a senior lecturer in the Department of Linguistics at the University of Ghana. He obtained his PhD from Indiana University where he studied linguistics. His areas of research include phonology, morphophonology, morphosyntax, semantics, applied linguistics, sociolinguistics, and pragmatics.

Cheick Félix Bobodo Ouedraogo is a teacher-researcher in the Department of Linguistics at the University of Joseph KI-ZERBO in Burkina Faso. He served as the Dean of this department from 2017 to 2021. Currently, he is the director of the master's program within the same department. He has a master's degree and PhD in linguistics from Joseph KI-ZERBO. His research focuses on sociolinguistics, particularly endangered languages, quality education, and adult literacy.

Kelello Alicia Rakolobe is a lecturer in the Department of Education Foundations at the National University of Lesotho Roma. She also supervises master's and PhD students. Her research interests are in education law, education policy, children's rights in education, social justice, and sexual diversity in the education sector. She is a member of the Lesotho Education Research Association. She holds a PhD in Education Policy Studies from the University of the Free State.

Moussa Mohamed Sagayar holds a PhD in Education Sciences. He is a research professor at the Ecole Normale Supérieure of Abdou Moumouni University in Niamey. He is also the director of Open and Distance Training–

TICE (FOAD-TICE) at Abdou Moumouni University of Niamey and deputy coordinator of the Center of University Pedagogy and Master's in engineering, Design of Educational Alternatives at ENS University of Niamey. His research interests are in studying and analysis of mathematics and languages of teaching and learning and teacher education.

Mamaramé Seck is a PhD holder in linguistics with concentration in discourse analysis. Among his research interests are the Wolof language and Senegalese society and culture. He has published books and book chapters among which include Youssou Ndour: A Cultural Icon and Leader in Social Advocacy (Peter Lang Publishers, 2020), Narratives as Muslim Practice in Senegal (Peter Lang Publishers, 2013), and an Intermediate Wolof textbook, Nanu Dègg Wolof (National African Language Resource Center (NALRC) at Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana). After teaching African languages and linguistics at the University of North Carolina at Chapel for six years (2008–2014), he joined IFAN (Institut Fondamental d'Afrique Noire) at Cheikh Anta Diop University in Dakar, Senegal.

Gabriel Simungala is a doctoral student in Linguistics at the University of the Western Cape, South Africa. He holds a teaching position in the Department of Arts, Languages and Literary Studies at the University of Zambia. He is a Sociolinguist who has published extensively in language education, youth and pop culture, critical and multimodal discourse analysis, globalization and mobility, linguistic/semiotic landscapes, Bantu linguistics and the sociolinguistics of language contact. His recent publications include Campus repertoires: interrogating semiotic assemblages, economy, and creativity. Semiotica, 2024 (with Ndalama-Mtawali, D.) and Translanguaging as means to Optimising Multilingual Education: A Zambian perspective. Routledge (with Jimaima, H.)

Beidy Sow is a senior lecturer in the African Studies Program at Indiana University. He obtained a Master's in Second Language Teaching from ENSup in Bamako. He earned a master's degree from Ohio University followed by a PhD with a focus on political leadership. He has always been passionate about language and politics in Africa where he has done several kinds of research. He has several publications such as in political leadership and the Bamanan language.

Dionnodji Tchaine has a PhD in Language Sciences. He is Professor and Researcher of Arts and Communication (FLLAC) at the University of N'Djamena, Chad. He has published widely in linguistics.

Jean Mathieu Tsoumou is a lecturer at Universidad Europea de Madrid. He obtained his PhD in English studies with a focus on computer-mediated communication and politics at Complutense university of Madrid, Spain, in 2018. He currently teaches general English courses and international communication at the University of Madrid in Gran Canarias Island. His research interests are mainly in Computer-mediated communication, politics, and multilingualism.

Constantine Yuka is the dean of Faculty of Arts, University of Benin in Nigeria. He is also the president of West African Linguistic Society (WALS) and the secretary-general of International Federation for Modern Languages and Literatures (FILLM). His research focusses on the structures of African languages, language documentation, language acquisition, and language planning.

List of Figures

Fig. 3.1	Magu Hospital	52
Fig. 3.2	Various departments	53
Fig. 3.3	Operating room	54
Fig. 3.4	Bugando entrance	55
Fig. 3.5	Bugando emergency	55
Fig. 3.6	Muhimbili emergency	56
Fig. 3.7	Judicial court in Magu	60
Fig. 3.8	Current judicial law for language use	60
Fig. 3.9	Bank transaction	61
Fig. 3.10	Bank deposit slip	62
Fig. 3.11	Transaction receipt	63
Fig. 3.12	Public office	64
Fig. 4.1	Title of the newspaper: Kijumba cha Maarifa, Thursday 7 March, 1963). (Source: Sadgrove, 2005, p. 177)	76
Fig. 9.1	Picture of linguistic practices in Congo-Brazzaville. Source: Tsoumou (2021a, 2021b, p. 123)	185
Fig. 9.2	Language practices in the southern and the northern Congo-Brazzaville	186
Fig. 9.3	Constitutions and language policy	189
Fig. 11.1	Southern Cameroons (formerly a United Nations Trust Territory under the United Kingdom (1922–1960) which voted in 1961 to become independent by federating with the French-speaking La République du Cameroun)	235

Fig. 11.2	English-Speaking Cameroonians protesting against poor infrastructure, marginalization, and the Francophone domination in Bamenda. (Pictures culled from BBC website. https://www.bbc.com/world-africa-45723211 ) (Notice from the placard in the picture that appears to be the thrust issue isn't language. It is about roads, jobs, water etc. It is about the fair distribution of resources, infrastructure, marginalization, and more)	236
Fig. 14.1	Languages spoken at the market (Dodo, 2015)	294
Fig. 14.2	Languages spoken in transport (Dodo, 2015)	295
Fig. 14.3	Languages spoken in places of leisure (Dodo, 2015)	295
Fig. 15.1	Policy process: adapted from CDC (online)	316
Fig. 21.1	Ethnic boundaries in Ghana ( Library of Congress 1968 )	444
Fig. 22.1	Divieto di Affissione , Cathedral wall, Harnet Avenue, Asmara	470
Fig. 22.2	Queen Elisabeth II commemoration plaque, Semaetat Avenue, Asmara	473
Fig. 22.3	Street sign Harnet Avenue, Asmara	477
Fig. 22.4	Internet icons, nameless street near Harnet Avenue, Asmara	477

List of Graphics

Graphic 1	Comparison of the two projections	416
Graphic 2	Demolinguistic estimates	417

List of Tables

Table 10.1	Types of signage and language use	212
Table 11.1	Grassroots definition of bilingualism in Cameroon by public servants' resident and working in both French- and English-speaking regions	231
Table 11.2	Indigenous Languages and Schools	232
Table 13.1	Percentage distribution of the Gambian population by ethnicity in 2013 censuses	264
Table 13.2	Languages used in different domains	281
Table 15.1	Distribution, by national ethnic language and by department, of the differences between the national relative weight of declared speakers and the weight of the ethnic group (i.e., potential speakers)	314
Table 15.2	Benin's language clusters	317
Table 18.1	Number of languages and their status	378
Table 18.2	Language use by domain	380
Table 20.1	Languages and their demographic weight	415
Table 20.2	Categories of languages based on the number of speakers	417
Table 20.3	Summary of functions of languages in Burkina Faso	420
Table 21.1	The administrative regions of Ghana from 1957 (five regions) to 2019 (sixteen regions)	447
Table 21.2	Medium of instruction policies of Ghana ( same color marks policy implementations that are the same—English-only policy is green, English medium from P2 is deep yellow; and English medium from P4 is blue )	453
Table 21.3	The medium of instruction policy types of Ghana	455
Table 21.4	Duration of language roles in the medium of instruction policies over time	457
Table 23.1	Working languages	498

Table 23.2	Languages in education	502
Table 26.1	Arabization in Algeria	562
Table 27.1	Percentage of languages present in administrative institutions	577
Table 27.2	Official press for training offers in French and Arabic	583
Table 27.3	Languages in media outlets	586
Table 32.1	Comparative table of languages spoken in the home in Botswana: 2001 and 2011 Census (Chebanne & Nyati-Ramahobo, 2003; Statistics Botswana, 2015)	685
Table 32.2	Language use in different domains in Botswana	691

1

Introduction

Esther Mukewa Lianza and Leonard Muaka

Africa is a multilingual society with some of the countries having more than 400 languages. This language scenario was further complicated in 1884–1885 when Africa was divided among European powers at the Berlin Conference. This division marked the beginning of colonization and imposition of colonial languages in Africa. This also marked the beginning of the marginalization and devaluation of African languages in Africa. Hence, almost all language policies which existed during colonial times favored the use of colonial languages (English, French, German, etc.) as official languages. Consequently, anyone who was fluent and literate in only African languages was not accorded any official place in the colonial state. However, whoever was fluent and literate in a colonial language held great status in the society. This is because for anyone to get a better job and education, one had to be a speaker and a writer of a colonial language. Ngugi wa Thiong'o (1986) in his famous book, Decolonising the Mind, articulates this scenario so well during colonial Kenya and especially in schools in the following quote:

In Kenya, English became more than a language: it was the language, and all the others had to bow before it in deference. Thus, one of the most humiliating experiences was to be caught speaking Gikuyu in the vicinity of the school. The culprit was given corporal punishment or was made to carry a metal plate around the neck with inscriptions such as I AM STUPID or I AM A DONKEY. (p. 11)

---

E. M. Lianza (✉)

Department of African Studies, Howard University, Washington, DC, USA

Therefore, an African child who was growing up and schooling in a colonial school was made to devalue his/her language. Not only to devalue but there was also the likelihood that the child would hate her/his language for associating it with corporal punishment. This was a lot for a young mind. Young minds are prone to internalize anything they are fed with at that tender age.

As a matter of fact, English was also associated with intelligence during colonial times (Lisanza, 2011). Once more Ngugi wa Thiong'o gives us a deposition of this during his primary schooling.

Nobody could pass the exam who failed the English language paper no matter how brilliant he had done in the other subjects. I remember one boy in my class of 1954 who had distinctions in all subjects except English, which he had failed. He was made to fail the entire exam. (p. 12)

A colonial student to go up the ladder of education had to pass the English test. Hence, education and a colonial language were synonymous. Unfortunately, as the chapters show in this volume, things have not changed that much since colonial times. Still in most contemporary Africa, the ex-colonial languages are still the official languages or co-official languages. The African languages are still devalued in official domains such as schools, court rooms, and parliaments. However, in unofficial domains such as markets and stores they are thriving. These are spaces where pragmatism dictates which language will be used. Hence, African countries must look for better ways of enabling and empowering these indigenous languages not only in informal setting but formal as well. By taking bold steps in enabling indigenous languages, African countries will be decolonizing the African spaces and their people.

In this handbook we report on the language policy of 31 of the states in Africa. The volume is divided into six parts. Part I explores language policies in East Africa. East African countries have a similar history given that they share borders; the same cross-border language, Swahili; and a common colonial history. This region was colonized by the British even though the Germans preceded the British in Tanzania. This part will discuss language policies in Kenya, Tanzania, and Uganda.

Part II discusses language policies in Central Africa. The focused countries are Burundi, Rwanda, Congo Brazzaville, and the Democratic Republic of Congo. These countries, just like their East African counterparts have a lot in common. For example, they share borders, and they were colonized by

---

L. Muaka

Department of World Languages & Cultures, Howard University,
Washington, DC, USA

e-mail: leonard.muaka@howard.edu

French-speaking countries. An interesting scenario is Rwanda where English occupies a special place in language policy matters.

Part III discusses language policies in West Africa. The countries discussed are Benin, Burkina Faso, Cabo Verde, Cameroon, Gambia, Ghana, Côte d'Ivoire (Ivory Coast), Mali, Niger, Nigeria, Senegal, and Togo. The selected countries in this region seem to be very diverse unlike the other regions although they also have similarities. In terms of similarities, some share common borders like Nigeria and Benin, and Senegal and Gambia. However, they also have major differences, for example, some were colonized by English-speaking colonizers, some by French-speaking colonizers, and others by Portuguese-speaking countries.

Part IV explores language policies in the Horn of Africa. The countries examined are Ethiopia, Eritrea, and Somalia. These countries seem to be very diverse yet similar. In terms of similarities, they share common borders. In terms of differences, on one hand, Ethiopia is one of the countries in Africa which was not colonized. On the other hand, Somalia was colonized by the British and Italians. And Eritrea was once part of Ethiopia.

Part V examines language policies in North Africa. The studied countries are Algeria, Chad, and Morocco. These countries share a common history in that they share a common language: Arabic. However, it is a unique region which has experienced two major forms of domination from the outside world. First, they were conquered by the Arab nations from the Middle East and then conquered by the European nations from the West.

Part IV discusses language policies in Southern Africa. The countries discussed are Botswana, Lesotho, Zambia, Zimbabwe, South Africa, and Namibia. These countries share a lot in common, for example, they share borders. Most of them were colonized by the British. Also, even though these countries are in Southern Africa, they are very diverse. For instance, South Africa was the last African country in 1994 to gain independence from a European colonizer. Additionally, unlike the other five countries in this region, Namibia was colonized by the Germans.

References

- Lisanza, E. M. (2011). What Does It Mean to Learn Oral and Written English Language: A Case Study of One Classroom in Kenya. Unpublished dissertation. University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign.
- Thiong'o, N. (1986). Decolonising the Mind. Nairobi: Heinemann.

Part I

Language Policies in East Africa

2

A Historical Perspective of the Language Policy in Kenya

Jane Akinyi Ngala Oduor and Shadrack Kipsang

Introduction

Kenya, a country in the Global South, was colonized by the British. The origin of English in Kenya dates to this colonial period. The country became independent in 1963 and a republic in 1964. It is one of the oldest members of the East African Community (EAC). It is a multi-ethnic, multicultural, and multilingual country. The indigenous languages in Kenya belong mainly to three linguistic families, namely, the Bantu, Nilotic, and Cushitic families. Among the three, the Bantu group has the largest number of speakers. Kiswahili is the most widely spoken among the Bantu languages because it is used as both first and second languages. The country at the moment is inhabited by different nationalities who use their first languages, for example, the Indians and many Europeans of British origin, among others. Naturally, the most appropriate language policy which is adopted by Kenya is a multilingual language policy.

Document analysis was used to obtain information for this chapter. Pre- and post-independence language policy documents, reports, and monographs were analyzed to establish the language practices in Kenya before and after independence. The challenges in the implementation and execution of language policies in different domains are also discussed. In addition,

---

J. A. N. Oduor (✉) • S. Kipsang
University of Nairobi, Nairobi, Kenya
e-mail: oduoer\_jane@uonbi.ac.ke