

Puspa Melati Wan
Saiqa Anne Qureshi
Rosila Bee Mohd Hussain Editors

Muslim Women's Lived Experiences and Intersectional Identities

A Global Perspective

Muslim Women's Lived Experiences and Intersectional Identities

Puspa Melati Wan • Saiqa Anne Qureshi •
Rosila Bee Mohd Hussain
Editors

Muslim Women's Lived Experiences and Intersectional Identities

A Global Perspective

 Springer

Editors

Puspa Melati Wan
School of Liberal Arts and Sciences
Taylor's University
Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia

Saiqa Anne Qureshi
School of Professional Studies
Johns Hopkins University
Baltimore, MD, USA

Rosila Bee Mohd Hussain
Department of Anthropology and Sociology
University of Malaya
Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia

ISBN 978-3-031-75728-0 ISBN 978-3-031-75729-7 (eBook)
<https://doi.org/10.1007/978-3-031-75729-7>

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s), under exclusive license to Springer Nature Switzerland AG 2024

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, expressed or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made. The publisher remains neutral with regard to jurisdictional claims in published maps and institutional affiliations.

This Springer imprint is published by the registered company Springer Nature Switzerland AG
The registered company address is: Gewerbestrasse 11, 6330 Cham, Switzerland

If disposing of this product, please recycle the paper.

To the resilient Muslim women worldwide, whose strength and stories inspire this work.

Preface

In a world where the narratives of Muslim women are often oversimplified or silenced, this book seeks to amplify their voices and illuminate the complexities of their lived experiences. Through diverse perspectives and scholarly insights, this book highlights the intricate layers of identity negotiation, empowerment, and resilience among Muslim women across the globe. From self-definition to digital presence, from faith to fundamental rights, each chapter offers a nuanced exploration of the multifaceted identities that shape the lives of Muslim women today.

Our journey in compiling this book has been both enlightening and humbling. We have been privileged to engage with the rich experiences shared by contributors from various backgrounds and disciplines. Their scholarship, passion, and commitment to advancing understanding in this field have been truly inspiring. As editors, it is our hope that this book serves as a catalyst for dialogue, reflection, and positive change. May it challenge stereotypes, foster empathy, and contribute to a more inclusive and equitable world for all.

The idea for this book stemmed from a deep recognition of the gaps and misrepresentations in the existing literature about Muslim women. Too often, their stories are told through a narrow lens, failing to capture the depth and diversity of Muslim women's experiences. We wanted to create a platform where authors could share their own stories and perspectives, offering a richer, more authentic portrayal of their lives and those around them. This book aims to break down the monolithic representations and highlight the dynamic, intersectional identities of Muslim women.

We have seen firsthand the powerful impact of sharing stories and fostering understanding. Each narrative, whether it was about overcoming adversity, finding faith, or navigating digital spaces, adds to the collective Muslim women's experiences. By bringing these stories to light, we hope to empower Muslim women and provide readers with a deeper appreciation of the complexities and nuances of their lives.

Furthermore, this book is a response to the growing global interest in issues of identity, gender, and faith. In a time of increasing polarization and misunderstanding, we believe it is more important than ever to foster conversations that bridge divides and build empathy. By showcasing the resilience and agency of Muslim women, we aim to contribute to a more nuanced and respectful discourse on identity and culture.

Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia
Baltimore, MD, USA
Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia

Puspa Melati Wan
Saiqa Anne Qureshi
Rosila Bee Mohd Hussain

Acknowledgments

بِسْمِ اللَّهِ الرَّحْمَنِ الرَّحِيمِ

In the name of Allah, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful.

Alhamdulillah, we have been granted the opportunity to publish this book with the guidance and blessings of Allah.

We would like to express our deepest appreciation to the respected authors who have contributed their invaluable insights to this volume. Your dedication and scholarly rigor have illuminated the critical issues explored in this book, and your efforts have significantly enriched the discourse on the multifaceted experiences and views of Muslim women.

Our sincere thanks go to all the participants who have been fundamental to the development of this work. Your willingness to share your stories and perspectives has provided the foundation upon which this book is built.

To our families and friends, your support and encouragement have been our pillars of strength throughout this journey. Your patience and understanding have enabled us to navigate and complete this project well. We are eternally grateful.

We extend our heartfelt gratitude to the panel of reviewers whose meticulous feedback and constructive criticism have immensely contributed to refining the content and ensuring its scholarly integrity. Your dedication to quality assurance has been invaluable in shaping this publication.

Finally, we acknowledge all those who have indirectly supported this endeavor. Your contributions, though perhaps unseen by many, have been crucial to the successful completion of this book.

Thank you all for your commitment, your insights, and your support. This book stands as a testament to our collective effort and shared dedication to the important issues faced by Muslim women around the world.

With gratitude,

Puspa Melati Wan, Saiqa Anne Qureshi, and Rosila Bee Mohd Hussain

Introduction

There is a growth in both women's studies and Islamic studies departments and educational programs at both the undergraduate and postgraduate levels considering the lives of Muslim women. This book sets out to serve those communities with a well-rounded, internationally inclusive, cross-disciplinary text to support them. Current texts about Islamic women are congregated in historical works, focused on the impact of women in early Islam, or in more modern work, which focuses either on Islamic majority countries or on immigration destinations ("The West"), focused on Western Europe and North America (the USA and Canada).

Otherwise, there are chapters about Muslim women interspersed in wider women's studies narratives and anthologies. This work focuses on the life course and lived experience widely across geographies. It also encompasses unique and modern issues brought to the forefront, which are more rarely discussed. That includes pressing issues about empowerment and Me Too, intersectionality including faith, identity, disability, the digital self and virtual presentation, career development, and transgender identity and faith. It also includes a wider discussion of feminism, focused on an exploration of the "whole self," including a presentation on maternal care and illness and parental identity. This unique contribution demonstrates our commitment to cutting-edge work in academic spaces, and elevating the voices of diverse scholars, across disciplines and geographies.

The discourse on religious inclusivity and gender equality has been well established over the years and across nations. Institutionalization of efforts via national policies and laws as well as support toward international agenda such as the Convention for the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW), the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women, the Beijing Declaration, and religious and gender inclusivity in 2030 sustainable goals is among the indicators of progress toward ensuring that every individual should be well protected and supported in their personal development and well-being. However, Muslims are not a monolith, nor are women. When considering faith, migration, class, sexuality, and other variables, the issues confronting women are often understudied and under-evaluated.

Gender issues are often highlighted in terms of gendered poverty, illiteracy, and political repression, in addition to a lack of power, autonomy, and status within institutions and society at large. These issues are arguably further exacerbated by religion and culture being taken into the equation. Thus, many writings have been published to reflect this double and triple jeopardy confronted by Muslim women. In addition, media and public opinions often highlight sensational stories and stereotypical views of Muslim women that are represented in unflattering binary images of oppressed or dangerous. Further mentioned issues in the public media highlight the simplistic write-up such as on clothing and headgear of Muslim women; voting rights and lack of accessibility; familial decisions; and the substandard role of women in the household which then frames Islam as the underlying source of these “problems.”

As much as the abovementioned issues are an important precursor to the discussion surrounding Muslim women, the argument that Muslim women are the oppressed majority has been overly simplistic and does not reflect the realities of the majority of Muslim women. This book aims to put forth a global perspective based on intersectionality embodied by Muslim women addressing questions such as the following: Who are these women? What are their stories and experiences? How do they personify faith and play their social roles? And how they manage the day-to-day spheres to balance their identity in the community, workplace, home, and faith. Thus, the discussion of the authors in this book will further highlight the varied experiences and realities of Muslim women through the inclusion of the interpretation of the Quran, the Islamic teachings by religious leaders, the societal expectations, and cultural imposition that Muslim women experience across different societal settings.

Authors are also varied in the way they formulate and discuss such experiences which would provide a more holistic lens toward what is perceived as feminism, oppression, and liberation; what is considered as imposing or personal choice; how Muslim women define themselves and renegotiate their sense of identity; how do structural constraints limit or serve as an empowering mechanism for agents of social change; how do Muslim women adapt and move forward with the current state of affairs and technological advancement; and how has the additional intersectionality of generation, class, sexuality, and migration status affected their self-definition, lived experiences, and ways to manage their daily challenges.

This book expands the current narrow discourse of Islam as a source of oppression on Muslim women, who are socialized and brainwashed into accepting their “second-class” status in the patriarchal world, who needed to be “saved” and “empowered” in order for them to be liberated and succeed in this material world. It is also the aim of this book to provide a platform where authors of different gender, class, ability, culture, and experiences come together and provide their varied interpretations and analysis of the “lived experiences” of Muslim women.

Additionally, the writings exemplify the diverse lens and experiences of Muslim women living in a predominantly Muslim nation compared to those living as a minority in their own nation. The contextual readings and alternative interpretations of Islamic teachings and practices would also provide important insights into the discussion raised. The writing angle in this book will also be varied, i.e., analysis with references to the Quran, autobiography piece, interview record, and a critical analysis looking at culture, social structures, and personal experiences both lived and observed. Contributing authors are also encouraged to include an end section to outline their recommendations, wish list, or suggestions for readers to understand the complex realities of Muslim women as well as to serve as a guide for practitioners and policymakers to support global Muslim women.

Below is a quick overview of the book sections:

The Label: Self-Definition and Imposed Identities

This section highlights the complex interplay between how Muslim women perceive themselves and how they are perceived by others. The chapters in this subsection examine a range of topics, from the intersection of culture, religion, and agency in the lives of Minang Muslim women navigating divorce to the nuanced literary identities of Muslim women writers in Malaysia. The contributions explore how feminist perspectives are shaped under an Islamic lens and the symbolic representation of women in cultural narratives. Additionally, the negotiation of identity through changes in marital status and surnames among South African Muslim women highlights the ongoing struggle between self-definition and societal expectations. Collectively, these essays offer a rich, multidimensional view of the challenges and triumphs faced by Muslim women in defining their identities within diverse cultural and social frameworks.

Presentation of the Self: Adjustment and the Digital Space

The section “Presentation of the Self: Adjustment and the Digital Space” explores how Muslim women navigate and present their identities in an increasingly digital world. The chapters cover a range of topics, including how Malay Muslim women embrace or resist digital changes and the portrayal of a Muslim transgender woman’s struggle in Malaysian print media. The evolving norms of Muslim names and their impact on identity are examined, as is the role of social media in shaping religious identities in a Muslim nation. Additionally, the experiences of Muslim female migrants in non-Muslim societies highlight the complexities of belonging and identity in digital and physical spaces. These essays provide a comprehensive look at how digital spaces influence and transform the self-presentation and identity negotiation of Muslim women.

Agent of Change: Empowered and Resilient

This subsection presents the stories of Muslim women who have emerged as powerful agents of transformation and resilience in their communities and beyond. Through a series of insightful chapters, we explore the resilience of Muslim women living with HIV, shedding light on their unique challenges and strategies for coping and thriving. The dialogue with Francirosy Campos Barbosa, an Islamic intellectual, activist, and academic, showcases her experiences and insights as an agent of change in Brazil. We also include the Islamic perspective on amicable divorce, co-parenting, and post-divorce harmony, offering guidance and support for Muslim women navigating these challenging transitions. Finally, we explore the practice of traditional medicine and healing among female pengobat (shaman) in Pulau Penyengat, Kepulauan Riau, highlighting the invaluable role of women in preserving and transmitting local wisdom. These chapters celebrate the resilience, agency, and transformative power of Muslim women as they navigate and shape their communities and societies.

Conversion: Faith and Self-Identity

In this subsection, we explore the profound transformations experienced by women who have embraced Islam, examining how their newfound faith intersects with their sense of self and identity. Through a series of compelling chapters, we look into the experiences of Chinese Muslim women in Malaysia and China as they navigate the delicate balance between tradition and faith. We also explore the lived experiences of converted Japanese Muslim women, shedding light on how Islam becomes an integral part of their everyday lives. We also examine the identities and life choices of Filipino women who have embraced Islam, offering insights into the diverse paths and motivations behind their conversion journeys. All these chapters demonstrate the complex and deeply personal process of conversion, highlighting the ways in which faith shapes and reshapes the identities of women across different cultural and geographical contexts.

Basic Rights: Birth, Health, and Employment

The readers will be exposed to the lived experiences and challenges faced by Muslim women in accessing fundamental rights related to birth, health, and employment in this subsection. Through a series of thought-provoking chapters, we examine the experiences of Bangladeshi Muslim female migrant workers in Malaysia, shedding light on the realities of labor migration and the barriers they encounter in accessing healthcare and social support. We also explore the impact of Arab culture on the practice of violence against women in Libya, highlighting the urgent need for cultural sensitivity in addressing gender-based violence. Additionally, we highlight the embodied experiences of Malay Muslim women challenging societal discourses surrounding childbirth and maternal care, as well as the Islamic perspective on female circumcision and its implications for women's health and rights. Finally, we present an autoethnographic analysis of clandestine breast cancer among Muslim women, shedding light on the taboo and stigma surrounding women's health issues in certain communities. These chapters offer critical insights into the intersection of gender, religion, and human rights, urging for greater awareness, advocacy, and action to ensure the rights and well-being of Muslim women worldwide.

Contents

Part I The Label: Self Definition and Imposed Identities

Beyond Divorce: Unraveling the Intersection of Culture, Religion, and Agency in Minang Muslim Women's Lives	3
Puspa Melati Wan, Evelynnd, and Miza Izwanis Mangsor
Reading Between the Lines: Exploring the Literary Identities of Selected Muslim Women Writers in Malaysia	23
Kalai Vaani Rajandram
Feminism Under the Islamic Lens	45
Abdulaziz Mohamed Ali
The Imperfectly Perfect Rib	65
Maahil Saeed and Kalai Vaani Rajandram
What's in a Surname?: The Negotiation of Identity Among South African Muslim Women After Marriage	81
Quraisha Dawood

Part II Presentation of the Self: Adjustment and the Digital Space

Malay Muslim Women as Digital Being: Embracing Changes or Defying Forces?	103
Rosila Bee Mohd Hussain
Fight or Flight Response: An Intersectional Critical Discourse Representation of a Malaysian Muslim Transgender Woman in News Reports	117
Thavamalar Thuraisingam and Kelly Pei Leng Tee
What is in a Name? Muslim Names as an Identifier of Identity, Discrimination and Change	139
Saiqa Anne Qureshi

Role of Social Media in Shaping Muslim Women's Religious Identities: The Case of a Muslim Nation	155
Mariyam Shareefa, Visal Moosa, and Aisha Mohamed Rashad
The Rift in Belonging: Muslim Female Migrants in Kafir (Non-Muslim) Societies	175
Anya Nair and Naomi Nair
 Part III Agent of Change: Empowered and Resilient
Resilience in Muslim Women Living with HIV	197
Azahah Abu Hassan Shaari
Woman, Islamic, Intellectual, Activist, and Academic in Brazil? A Dialogue with Francirosy Campos Barbosa	219
Flávia Alessandra de Souza and Francirosy Campos Barbosa
From Single Motherhood to Co-parenthood: The Islamic Perspective on Amicable Divorce, Co-parenting, and Post-Divorce Harmony	239
Arjunaidi Wan, Zaim Azizi Abu Bakar, and Puspa Melati Wan
Practising Local Wisdom of Traditional Medicine and Healing Among Female Pengobat (Shaman) in Pulau Penyengat, Kepulauan Riau	259
Raja Fatimah Aura Azzahra and Rohaiza Rokis
 Part IV Conversion: Faith and Self Identity
Between Tradition and Faith: Navigating Identity Transformations of Chinese Muslim Women in Malaysia and China	283
Rachel Sing-Ee Tan, Miew Luan Ng, Wan Khairulhusna Wan Mokhtar, Peng Fei Deng, and Jinru Zhang
Islam as 'Everyday Lived Religion': The Case of Female Muslim Converts in Japan	309
Satoshi Adachi
Filipino Women Converts to Islam: Their Identities and Life Choices ...	327
Johanna O. Zulueta
 Part V Basic Rights: Birth, Health and Employment
Lived Experiences of Bangladeshi Muslim Female Migrant Workers in Malaysia	341
Shahnaz Sarker, Rosila Bee Mohd Hussain, and Hanafi Hussin

The Impact of Arab Culture on the Practice of Violence Against Women in Libya	363
Naima Eissa Alkour and Rosila Bee Mohd Hussain
Only Empowered Maternities Here! Singaporean Malay Women's Active Intersecting of Dominant State, Medical and Islamic Framework of Maternity	393
Sharifah Huseinah Madihid
Female Genital Mutilation: Cultural or Religious Obligation? Exploring Perspectives on Female Genital Mutilation Within Communities and Practitioners	415
Dania Jemal Mohamed Brhan
A Global South Perspective: An Autoethnographic Analysis of Breast Cancer Secrecy Among Muslim Women	437
Mariam Seedat-Khan and Ujjwala Gupta

About the Contributors

Zaim Azizi Abu Bakar is a lecturer at the School of Liberal Arts & Sciences, Taylor's University, teaching Mata Pelajaran Umum and social sciences modules. He holds a Master's in Teaching and Learning from Taylor's University and Bachelor's in Human Sciences from International Islamic University Malaysia. Zaim was involved in scholarly and industry experience, being an expert reviewer for Oxford Fajar, reviewing Higher Education (IPT) textbooks, and winning several national awards in E-Content Development for MPU modules and under Social Sciences and Humanities Category.

Satoshi Adachi is Professor of Sociology at Kwansei Gakuin University, Japan. He works widely in the areas of sociological theory, political philosophy, immigrants and ethnic minorities, religion, and gender. His main research focus is Muslim women's faith and social engagement in Europe and Asia, particularly in England, Malaysia, and Japan. More recently, he has explored Muslim women's relationships with sport in post-secular society. His publications include Liberal Nationalism and Multiculturalism: Social Integration Policy and Muslims in Britain (Keiso Shobo, 2013, in Japanese), Identity Theory of Reflexive Modernity: Second-generation British Muslims in Post-9/11 (Koyo Shobo, 2020, in Japanese), and Muslim and British Post-9/11: Identities in Reflexive Modernity (Trans Pacific Press, 2023, in English). He has received several awards, including the 9th Japan Sociological Society's Prize for Article in 2010, the Kansai Sociological Association's Prize for Presentation in 2011, and the 20th Japan Sociological Society's Prize for Book in 2021.

Abdulaziz Abdulaziz Mohamed Ali founded the Sweet Onion Marketing newsletter to help freelancers and SME owners. He earned his MA in Corporate Communication. In his early childhood, he had the opportunity to study in a traditional Islamic school, where he studied for twelve years in Islamic Studies. He is passionate about social work and community development and aspires to be a teacher. He worked with UNHCR and taught Christian youth and refugees for two years. He is currently based in Istanbul, working as a content strategist for tech startups. Email: abdulazizali026@gmail.com

Naima Eissa Alkour, a Libyan native, has been passionate about sociology since a young age. After finishing high school with a specialization in social science, she went on to excel in her undergraduate studies in sociology at Misrata University. Building upon her educational foundation, Naima pursued a master's degree in Sociology and Anthropology at the International Islamic University in Malaysia, earning her degree in 2018. Currently, she is working toward her PhD at the University of Malaya, where she is further exploring the areas of anthropology and sociology with a particular focus on cultural studies.

Raja Fatimah Aura Azzahra was an undergraduate student from the International Islamic University Malaysia (IIUM) who earned a Bachelor's in Human Sciences, majoring in Sociology and Anthropology. She is originally from Pulau Penyengat, Tanjung Pinang, Kepulauan Riau. She has a special research interest in medical anthropology, focusing on understanding traditional medicine and traditional knowledge. In 2021, she was honored as Duta Bahasa Kepulauan Riau.

Francirosy Campos Barbosa is an anthropologist, professor, and researcher at the Department of Psychology at FFCLRP, University of São Paulo (USP), and professor of the Postgraduate Programs in Psychology at FFCLRP and Postgraduate Program in Anthropology PPGAS/USP. She graduated in social sciences from the Faculty of Philosophy, Letters and Human Sciences FFLCH at USP, where she received a master's degree and a doctorate in anthropology. His postdoctorate was in Islamic Theology at the University of Oxford. She is coordinator of the Anthropology Group in Islamic and Arab Contexts—GRACIAS and researcher at the Center for Anthropology, Performance and Drama (Napedra), at the Visual Anthropology Group—GRAVI, all at USP. Francirosy organized the work Olhares femininos sobre o Islã: etnografias, metodologias e imagens (Hucitec, 2010) and co-organized the collections: Performance – Arte e Antropologia (Hucitec, 2010), Islam, decolonialidade e(m) diálogos plurais (Ambigrama, 2022), Report on Islamophobia in Brazil (Ambigrama, 2022), and Direitos humanos, interculturalidade e mundo islam: perspectivas interdisciplinares (UNOESC, 2022), in addition to being the author of the books Performances Islâmicas em São Paulo: entre arabescos, luas e tâmaras (Edições Terceira Via, 2017) and Hajja, Hajja: a experiência de peregrinar (Ambigrama, 2021). E-mail: franci@ffclrp.usp.br.

Dania Jemal Mohamed Brhan is a third culture Eritrean woman born and raised in Saudi Arabia who pursued her bachelor's degree in mass communication in Malaysia and resided there for career establishment as social media content management and a freelance content writer. She then continued her journey as PR and Marketing Specialist in Doha, Qatar. As a Muslim third culture woman, her passion in exploring and learning culture and traditions in relation to Islam became a part of her identity as she studied and worked in multi-diverse communities. Her ability to speak and understand more than four languages as well as living in Muslim communities exhilarates her journey in researching and writing on social dilemmas that contribute to the initial pace of bringing positive outcomes to the public. She aims to study and understand different perspective and angles in relation to culture and Islam by conducting researches and attaining concrete results.

Quraisha Dawood obtained her PhD from the University of KwaZulu-Natal in 2016. Her research interests include domestic work, Muslim women in the workplace, and emerging occupations in South Africa. She is the author of Stirring the Pot, a novel based on the relationships between domestic workers and their employers in Durban, published in 2022 by Penguin Random House. She is currently the Deputy Dean of Research at the IIE's Varsity College in South Africa.

Pengfei Deng is currently a lecturer in Yunnan Vocational College of Transportation. He is pursuing a PhD in Education at INTI International University in Malaysia. His research focuses on innovative and entrepreneurial education. He has previously served as a sales and service consultant trainer at Shenlong Automobile Company (Peugeot and Citroën) and a service consultant trainer at BYD Auto. He is also a certified e-commerce professional in China and holds the SYB entrepreneurship coach title. Pengfei is dedicated to advancing educational methods and fostering entrepreneurship among students.

Evelynd is a lecturer of Communication Science, Department of Sociology, Universitas Negeri Padang, Indonesia. She pursued her Master's in Communication and Media Studies from Monash University, Australia. She completed her Bachelor's in Communication and Journalism from Universitas Padjadjaran, Indonesia. Previously, she served as Digital Content Producer for the Australia-Indonesia Centre. She was a professional intern at the Australian Broadcasting Corporation and actively involved in bilateral organizations such as Australia Indonesia Youth Association (AIYA) and Conference of Australia Indonesia Youth (CAUSINDY). She is a co-founder of Minang Connect, an online activism platform as part of her passion for connecting youth potential in education, entrepreneurship, and social and cultural activities of Minangkabau diaspora.

Ujjwala Gupta, is a Doctorate graduate in Development Studies and a Public Health faculty member in Yenepoya (Deemed to be University) in Mangalore, Karnataka, India. She has over a decade of research experience in community-based family planning and maternal and child healthcare. Dr. Gupta is a member of the International Sociological Association—ISA. She is the recipient of the prestigious International Fellowships—Shastri Indo Canada Doctoral Research Fellowship and the Policy Communication Fellowship—Population Reference Bureau (USAID). Dr. Ujjwala can be contacted via email at ujjwalagupta10@gmail.com.

Rosila Bee Mohd Hussain is Associate Professor in the Department of Anthropology and Sociology at the University of Malaya, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. She earned her PhD in Sociology from the University of Western Australia and has a keen interest and expertise in social inequality, identity, cross-cultural studies, youth culture, and contemporary social issues. She has published over 70 papers, including journal articles, book chapters, and proceedings. She is actively involved in research and remains committed to producing new outputs to share with the world. She hopes to conduct more cross-cultural studies, both in Malaysia and abroad.

Hanafi Hussin is Professor of Southeast Asian Studies and Dean of the Faculty of Creative Arts, Universiti Malaya. His main focus of research is the anthropology of Southeast Asia, particularly on ritual and performing arts. He actively researches and publishes on rituals and identity of several communities in Southeast Asia, particularly in the Southern Philippines, Borneo, and Peninsular Malaysia. He is also the Editor-in-Chief for JATI—Journal of Southeast Asian Studies and Borneo Research Journal. He can be reached at hanafih@um.edu.my.

Sharifah Huseinah Madihid is a PhD candidate with the Department of Anthropology and Sociology in the University of Malaya. She has taught Sociology in Taylor's College and helped design a Sociology and History curriculum in a private institution in Malaysia. Her current research looks at the phenomena of conversions to Salafism and Shi'ism within a traditionally Sufi Hadhrami diaspora in the Malay Peninsula. She is also an award-winning children's book author. In her free time, she enjoys exploring the outdoors by hiking through the Malaysian jungle with her children.

Miza Izwanis Mangsor is a communication and broadcasting educator at the Multimedia University in Cyberjaya, Malaysia. She holds an MA in Professional Communication with a focus on Film and Video from Edith Cowan University in Western Australia, which she obtained in 2008. Prior to her academic career, Miza started her professional journey at ASTRO television station, where she worked as a production team member, producing live and recorded programs, award shows, concerts, and reality series. Miza's research interests lie at the intersection of film and cinema studies, documentary filmmaking, and the impact of popular culture on new media, radio, and cinema. She is currently exploring opportunities to pursue a PhD, with a growing interest in the area of volunteer tourism. In addition to her teaching responsibilities, Miza is actively involved in a Knowledge Transfer Program (KTP) research project focused on "Empowering Single Mothers' Entrepreneurs through Digital Entrepreneurship Workshops."

Wan Khairulhusna Wan Mokhtar is currently a senior lecturer at the Faculty of Education and Liberal Arts, INTI International University, Malaysia. She earned her PhD from the University of Putra Malaysia in 2012 and studied Malay linguistics, sociolinguistics, language sociology, and anthropology. Her current interests include gamification, bibliometrics, Indigenous language analysis, and preservation. Her publications include several Scopus-indexed journal papers: Relevance of Content and Satisfaction of Students towards Gamification of Self Development Skill Course (2024), Self-Development Skills using Gamification via Blackboard e-Learning (2024), Students' Online Learning Challenges in Malay Language Communication Course during Pandemic Covid-19 (2023), Students' Attention and Confidence in Learning via Gamification (2023), and Kensiu Language Preservation: An Analysis Based on the Typological Framework of Language Threats (2022). He also co-authored the book Dialektologi Bahasa Peribumi (2023).

Visal Moosa holds a PhD in Education from Universiti Brunei Darussalam and a master's degree in educational management and leadership from Universiti Malaya. Dr. Visal has served in various positions in the education sector including leading teacher, principal, and educational development officer at the Ministry of Education. Currently, he is the deputy vice chancellor (Research and Innovation) at Islamic University of Maldives. Dr. Visal is a consultant in quantitative data analysis. He is also an active figure in research and publication and has contributed to a number of WOS/SCOPUS -indexed journal articles.

Anya Nair is currently a junior in the University of Illinois, Urbana Champaign, after completing 2 years at Taylor's University American Degree Transfer Program in Liberal Arts. She will graduate with a double degree in Sociology and Geography. She was born in Atlanta, Georgia, to South Indian parents but has spent most of her life in Asia, growing up between Singapore and India where she completed her A-Levels in Geography, Biology, and English Language independently while playing competitive tennis. Anya served as Student President of her academic program at Taylor's University and has spent much of her time over the last two years volunteering at a refugee school. She hopes to pursue a meaningful career in social work, impacting and advocating for those in need.

Naomi Nair is a student at Monash University Malaysia, currently completing a double degree in Global Studies and Applied Economics. She was born in the USA to South Indian parents but grew up predominantly in Singapore before moving to India to pursue competitive tennis. Home-schooled from ages 7 to 18, Naomi completed her A-Levels in Business, Economics, and English Literature independently. Naomi is currently the president of the Monash University Volunteer Program (MUVF) and is looking to pursue a career in humanitarian aid and policy reform, taking a multifaceted approach to advocacy and innovation in the field.

Miew Luan Ng currently serves as the Dean of the Faculty of Education and Liberal Arts at INTI International University, Malaysia. Her research interests cover crucial areas such as education, media education, political communication, minority press, and language and power. Her publication includes Scopus-indexed journal papers such as Malaysian Chinese language newspapers and national identity: A study of the roles of Sin Chew Daily in Chinese cultural preservation and nation building (2018), Chinese Cultural Preservation, Identity and Community: Examining the roles of Sin Chew Daily in Bridging Chinese Education, Cultural and Religious Rights of the Chinese Community in Malaysia (2020), Vaxx-Confident and Vaxx-Hesitant Agents: Factors Affecting COVID-19 Vaccination Willingness Among Young Adults in Klang Valley, Malaysia (2023), Perceived Social Media Influencers' Reputation of a Beauty Cosmetics Company: A Perspective of Customers (2024), and book chapters such as Chinese newspapers, ethnic identity and the state: The case of Malaysia, In Media and the Chinese Diaspora: Community, Communications and Commerce (2006), and Private Universities: The Tension between Quality and Market Forces, In The Dilemma of Malaysian's Higher Education (2018).

Saiqa Anne Qureshi is Adjunct Faculty at both Johns Hopkins University and Saint Mary's College of California. Her academic background includes a PhD in Social Science from the American Institute at the University of Nottingham, UK, an MSc in Sociology, Oxford, and BA, University of California, San Diego, USA, in Sociology, Political Science, and Near Eastern History, as well as an MBA from Imperial College London, UK. A mixed methods researcher, she writes, teaches, and speaks extensively about the intersection of sociological research and the experience of work and the workplace, specifically about optimizing work culture, including best hiring and management practices, the impact of discrimination, inclusion in the workplace, and leadership.

Kalai Vaani Rajandram is Senior Lecturer with the School of Liberal Arts and Sciences in Taylor's University. She has been in the education industry for 20 years now. She has a PhD in Education from Taylor's University, a Master's Degree in English Literature from Universiti Sains Malaysia, and a BA (Hons) in English Language and Literature Studies from the same university. Her expertise is in narrative ethnography, netnography, and the study of social realities. Her recent study utilized narrative responses from online platforms to facilitate educators in the co-construction of meanings to literary text using Digital Ethnography. Her research is multidisciplinary spanning across language and literature, anthropology, and sociology. She uses narratives from not only literature in English but also narratives from sects of societies and online communities whose voices are not heard. Her focus on these multiple realities is used to comprehend how gender, identity, and culture are constructed in societies today.

Aisha Mohamed Rashad is a senior lecturer at Kulliyyah of Islamic Revealed Knowledge and Human Sciences, Islamic University of Maldives (IUM). She completed her PhD in Islamic Revealed Knowledge and Heritage from International Islamic University Malaysia (IIUM). She obtained her Master's in Education specializing in Guidance and Counseling and Bachelor's in Islamic Revealed Knowledge and Heritage from IIUM. Her research interests include counseling, education, Muslim women's issues, and Shari'ah issues.

Rohaiza Rokis holds Doctor of Sociology in Sociology of Work from the University of Bristol, England, UK. She is Associate Professor at the Department of Sociology and Anthropology, International Islamic University Malaysia. She is the current Head of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology. She also served as the Deputy Dean at the Office of Academic and Internalisation and Academic Advisor. She was the Visiting Academic at Yuan Ze University, Taiwan, and Academic Member of the IIUM Research Ethics Committee. She is also Research Consultant at the Malaysian Productivity Corporation (MPC). Dr. Rohaiza specializes in the sociology of work and is interested in women's empowerment, behavioral insights, and gender studies. She has authored and edited books and articles on the topic mentioned.

Maahil Saeed is a Maldivian student in Taylor's University pursuing an undergraduate degree in social sciences, specializing in social work and innovation. Ever since leaving school, she has been involved in various UNESCO and UNDP projects and workshops back in the Maldives. As an enthusiast of culture and history, she has also participated and volunteered with the Maldivian Heritage Survey for historical site and artifacts. Her interests and experiences are in writing about topics in an anthropological view. She has been an associate writer for Maldives Financial Review and wrote articles relating to the Maldivian society, concentrating on urbanization and current affairs. Another passion of hers is as a volunteer facilitator for school-going children, focusing on fostering their leadership skills and life skills. Recently, she has completed a year as a Work-Based Learning employee in a Malaysian NGO advocating for human rights for asylum seekers and refugees. She would like to keep working in these fields while adding to her bibliography. E-mail: saeedmaahil@gmail.com

Shahnaz Sarker is Assistant Professor at the Department of Sociology, Jagannath University, Dhaka-1100, Bangladesh. At present, she is pursuing her PhD at the Department of Anthropology and Sociology, Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences, University of Malaya, Malaysia. Her area of academic interest covers international migration, female migration, gender issues, social capital, and ethnic communities. Her interest also extended to qualitative research methodologies as well as mixed method research.

Mariam Seedat-Khan CCS is an AACSB-certified clinical sociologist and a UKZN-Imbokodo executive. She was named the UKZN-2021 phenomenal woman for founding Simply Managing Academic Related Tasks to assist those with learning disorders during SARS-Cov-2. She is a member of the International Sociological Association—ISA, South African Sociological Association, Asia Pacific Sociological Association, Canadian Sociological Association, and World Academy of Science, Engineering and Technology and a board member of AACSB and ISA. She is a visiting professor at Taylor's University in Malaysia and Covenant University in Nigeria. She chairs the International Research Network for applied and clinical sociologists RC46. seedatm@ukzn.ac.za.

Azahah Abu Hassan Shaari, is a university lecturer in the Faculty of Social Sciences and Humanities. Her primary research interests lie in substance use disorder (SUD), with a specific emphasis on gaining a contextual understanding of individuals' narratives in SUD recovery. Currently, she is examining the motivations for people in recovery from SUD who decided to work at community-based organizations (CBO) in Malaysia. Drawing on a background in social work, Azahah has had the privilege of serving diverse clients across various international locations, spanning from New York and Michigan in the USA to Malaysia. This extensive exposure has provided her with the opportunity to engage with a broad spectrum of individuals, including those in recovery from substance use disorder (SUD), inmates, at-risk youth, and people living with HIV/AIDS.

Mariyam Shareefa is Senior Lecturer at the Centre for Research and Publication of the Islamic University of Maldives. She holds a PhD degree in Education from Universiti Brunei Darussalam. She received a Master of Education and BA (Teaching English as a Second Language) from the Maldives National University, Maldives. Beginning her career as a primary teacher, she has served at various levels of the education sector including Supervisor, Leading Teacher, Assistant Principal, and Headmaster. Dr. Mariyam Shareefa has several publications in WOS/SCOPUS-indexed journals. Her most frequent publication areas are learning and instruction, inclusive education, and multigrade teaching.

Flávia Alessandra de Souza has a degree in social sciences from the State University of São Paulo Júlio de Mesquita Filho—UNESP (2001), a master's degree in social sciences from the Federal University of São Carlos—UFSCar (2004), and a doctorate in sociology from UFSCar (2008), with an internship PhD at the University of Pittsburgh (2007). She worked as a guest lecturer at the City University of New York (CUNY, John Jay College of Criminal Justice, Department of Latin American and Latina/o Studies, 2009). She is a professor of sociology in the Department of Philosophy and Human Sciences at the State University of Santa Cruz—UESC, Ilhéus, BA, Brazil (since 2009). She is affiliated with the Movimento Negro Unificado—MNU (Unified Black Movement in Brazil), is a member of the International Sociological Association (ISA)—Research Committee 46 on Clinical Sociology, and has interdisciplinary experience in Race Relations, Black Movement, and Local Power in the countryside of the State of São Paulo, Black Women and Black Feminism, Health of the Black Population, Expressions of Africa (Kliptown-Soweto, South Africa), and the African Diaspora. E-mail: fasouza@uesc.br.

Rachel Sing-Ee Tan is Senior Lecturer in the Faculty of Education and Liberal Arts at INTI International University, Malaysia. Having earned a PhD in Higher Education from the University of Otago in 2019, she actively engages in the supervision of student research. Her research interests are broadly centered around the themes of internationalization and globalization in higher education. She is currently the Principal Investigator for research on using AI in assessments. Additionally, she is involved in projects that explore the interactions between international students and local culture in Malaysia, the development of a museum for immigrants in Selangor, and teacher's mental well-being in China and Malaysia.

Kelly Pei Leng Tee is Senior Lecturer at the School of Liberal Arts and Sciences, Faculty of Social Sciences and Leisure Management, Taylor's University, Malaysia. She has a Master of Arts (English Language) from Universiti Putra Malaysia (UPM) and a Bachelor of Arts in English Language from the same university. She has over 10 years of experience in higher education teaching and learning and has led numerous workshops for students and educators. She also actively engages in research and scholarly activities. She has published papers in indexed and non-indexed journals and has been involved in several research projects related to teaching and learning (T&L).

Thavamalar Thuraisingam is an experienced academic with about 30 years of involvement in the higher education landscape in Malaysia. She graduated with a degree in Education (TESL) and a Master's in English as a Second Language from the University of Malaya, Kuala Lumpur. She has taught a variety of language-related courses, namely general English proficiency modules, academic writing, and communication courses to pre-university and undergraduate students. She is currently attached to the American Degree Transfer Program of Taylor's University. Her areas of research and training interests are in education, language, linguistics, and marginalized communities. Thavamalar was involved in a research project on assessment in transnational education funded by the Australian Teaching and Learning Council and was also an active co-researcher in a project funded by the National Higher Education Research Institute of Malaysia entitled public-private equilibrium—balancing growth with quality and equity in higher education.

Arjunaidi Wan is currently an academic staff member at Spectrum International University College Malaysia. He holds a Master's Degree in Managerial Psychology from HELP University College and a double degree in Psychology and Mass Communication. He has diverse experience across various fields, including academia at the International Islamic University Malaysia (IIUM), as well as in training and development and business. Because of his early working experience with Professor Emeritus Tan Sri Dr. Mohd Kamal Bin Hassan (former Rector of IIUM), he developed a strong interest in learning and understanding the positive impact of Islamic rulings on individuals, families, and Muslim society. He is currently an active committee member at Alwi Mosque (Perlis, Malaysia).

Puspa Melati Wan holds a PhD in Sociology and Anthropology from the International Islamic University Malaysia (IIUM) and is Associate Professor of Sociology at Taylor's University, Malaysia. She earned her MSc in Sociology from the University of Oxford, UK, and her BA in Sociology and Psychology from the University of San Francisco, USA. Identifying as a clinical sociologist, she is deeply passionate about community engagement. Puspa has collaborated with both local and international NGOs and has managed grassroots empowerment programs targeting various groups including women, with a focus on intersectionality. Puspa Melati Wan is the Honorary Secretary of Malaysian Social Science Association and the regional representative for ISA Research Committee Clinical Sociology (RC 46). Email: wanpuspamelati@gmail.com

Jinru Zhang is a graduate of the Master of Education Management (MEM) at INTI International University. Her academic interests encompass ethnic and cultural identity. She has a strong background in educational management and has contributed to various research projects focused on improving educational practices. She is committed to exploring the intersections of education, culture, and identity and advancing the understanding of these critical areas in the field of education.

Johanna O. Zulueta is Professor at the Faculty of Sociology of Toyo University. She does research on migration, ethnicities, military basing, gender and families, citizenship, and aging. Among her recent publications are Women and COVID-19: A Clinical and Applied Sociological Focus on Family, Work, and Community (Routledge, 2024, co-edited with Mariam Seedat-Khan) and Okinawan Women's Stories of Migration: From War Bride to Issei (Routledge, 2022). She has had visiting appointments at Thammasat University (Thailand), University of Malaya, Taylor's University (Malaysia), and Seoul National University Asia Centre. She is currently on the Executive Board of the Research Committee on Clinical Sociology (RC 46) of the International Sociological Association.

Part I
The Label: Self Definition and Imposed
Identities

Beyond Divorce: Unraveling the Intersection of Culture, Religion, and Agency in Minang Muslim Women's Lives

Puspa Melati Wan, Evelynd, and Miza Izwanis Mangsor

Introduction

An ethnic group indigenous to the Indonesian highlands of West Sumatra is called the Minangkabau people. However, their cultural influence is not limited to Indonesia; it also exists in neighboring Malaysia, where there are sizable Minang communities. The Minangkabau people are predominantly Muslims and are known for their distinctive matrilineal society, which gives women important responsibilities in family and communal decision-making as well as emphasizes the maternal line of succession (Elfira, 2023). In Minangkabau societies, females are often perceived as strong and independent women and are placed on a high social status, recognized by both men and women. Female lineage is the source of inheritance, property, and family names. Land and property are traditionally owned by women, and matrilineal marriages result in husbands moving in with their wives. Because of this matrilineal arrangement, women now frequently possess significant social and economic power in the society (Elfira, 2023). The strong social support within the Minangkabau communities, in both Malaysia and Indonesia, is also an important feature of this community (Hartati et al., 2021). It is known that the support network among the members of this community extends beyond the immediate family members to the entire community through which women are able to fall back on when in

P. M. Wan (✉)

Taylor's University, Subang Jaya, Selangor, Malaysia

e-mail: wanmelati.wanah@taylors.edu.my

Evelynd

Universitas Negeri Padang, Padang, Indonesia

e-mail: evelynd@fis.unp.ac.id

M. I. Mangsor

Multimedia University, Cyberjaya, Selangor, Malaysia

e-mail: miza.izwanis@mmu.edu.my need of emotional, financial, as well as practical support (Putri et al., 2022). These social settings and structures serve as an interesting dimension to the understanding of marriage experience and divorce management among Muslim women.

In Malaysia, though the Minangkabau communities can be found in several different states (i.e., Selangor, Malacca, Perak), the state of Negeri Sembilan is the home to the majority of Minangkabau population (Britannica, 2012). These Minang women have made significant contributions in the spheres of business, politics, and education. As for Indonesia, the center of Minangkabau community is still in West Sumatra, where the population gathers around the provincial capital of Padang. Yet, the Minangkabau people are also present in other regions of Indonesia, such as Jakarta, where they have developed thriving societies and cultural establishments. Rich traditions, a strong feeling of community, and a distinctive matrilineal system are the main characteristics of Minangkabau society and culture (Elfira, 2018; Hadler, 2009). Though similar traditions and communal and matrilineal emphases are also evident among the Minangkabau diaspora in Malaysia, the Minang individuals may modify their customs to conform to the larger Malaysian framework (Mundayat, 2016) and to navigate gender standards of the country.

The Minangkabau people in Malaysia and Indonesia have managed to maintain their cultural identity while also adjusting to the sociopolitical landscapes of their respective nations. Islamic principles have an impact on many facets of life in Malaysia, including marriage and divorce. For instance, Minang women's divorce proceedings are impacted by Malaysia's interpretation of the Islamic Family Law Act, which regulates issues including marriage, divorce, and child custody for Muslims. Although Islamic ideals are likewise important in Indonesia, there are differences in how Islamic law is interpreted and applied. For example, divorce procedures in West Sumatra would combine Islamic law with customary laws from the Minangkabau community due to the presence of adat law in the area (Elfira, 2023). Both in Malaysia and Indonesia, the Minangkabau people continue to preserve and celebrate their cultural legacy despite the difficulties posed by modernization and globalization. These factors affect women's empowerment and general standing within their respective civilizations, highlighting differences in societal structures and regulations (Abdullah et al., 2014).

Brief Overview of Malaysian-Minang and Indonesian-Minang Muslim Women

Women have important and powerful responsibilities in both Malaysian and Indonesian Minang cultures. In social situations and family decision-making, women frequently hold influence. Minang women are often entrusted with significant obligations related to upholding peace within the family and guaranteeing the survival of customs and traditions. Minangkabau traditional proverb says, "Limpapeh rumah nan gadang, umbun puruak pagangan kunci, pusek jalo kumpulan tali, nan gadang basa batuah.” Limpapeh itself means the middle pillar of a West Sumatra traditional house “rumah gadang,” which is an analogy of the salient role of a mother in a family (Sismarni, 2011). The proverb explains that mothers in Minangkabau are the “key holders” (pagangan kunci), the core (pusek jalo), as well as highly appreciated (basa batuah) in the society.

Another term of a mother’s role commonly used in Minangkabau is Bundo Kanduang, which is not only regarded as the authority of properties in matrilineal bloodline (Sismarni, 2011) but also as the leadership of the households as well as in the public sphere (Febriyeni et al., 2023). Bundo Kanduang holds ethical principles in terms of family management, such as educating the children to be morally upright and with strong character (Munir et al., 2022). In terms of parenting approach, the role of Bundo Kanduang has been said to be derived from a legend of Malin Kundang. The mother applies the pattern of “learning by doing” which then becomes “learning by experience” to nurture and educate Malin, her son, to be skilled, hard-working, and resilient (Thahar, 2018).

Though the status, gender roles, power structures, and influence of women in Minang society may have changed over time, the core of Minang culture and matrilineal heritage is still widely valued and recognized (Elfira, 2023). Higher education and chances for professions outside the home are now more accessible to Minang women. This in turn affects the role that women play at home and in the community. Minangkabau women also pride themselves on their economic independence and involvement in entrepreneurial activities. This economic autonomy can provide women with resources and opportunities they need to play their role within the traditional roles and societal expectations (Dilova et al., 2022).

Contextualizing Divorce Among Malaysian-Minang and Indonesian-Minang Muslim Women

Divorce is a challenging and often stigmatized experience for Muslim women, especially in patriarchal societies. Women are often blamed for the failure of the marriage; though there are cases as such, the contributing factors of divorce may stem from either or both. Women have also been reported to face social ostracism and financial insecurity as a result of divorce. To exacerbate the post-divorce experience, in many Muslim-majority countries, women have limited rights when it comes to divorce from legal and social barriers (Gouda & Potrafke, 2016).

Looking at the various divorce cases (divorce lawsuits) filed at the West Sumatera Religious Court, there were 5946 divorce cases in 2014. A more recent statistics as shown in Table 1 below shows the percentage of population according to regency/city and marital status. The data reveals that in most cases, when there is an increase of marriages in these areas, there is also an increased trend of divorce reported. In fact, it is interesting to note that in the case of Padang Panjang, the decrease of marriage still shows an increase in divorce cases, while in the case of West Sumatra