Notes on Contributors

Helen Beebe is Samuel Hall Professor of Philosophy at the University of Manchester. Her research focuses on issues surrounding Humeanism and its rivals. She is the author of Hume on Causation (Routledge 2006) and Free Will: An Introduction (Palgrave 2013).

Karen Bennett is Associate Professor of Philosophy at Cornell University. She is the co-editor of Oxford Studies in Metaphysics, and the author of many articles in metaphysics and philosophy of mind. Her book Making Things Up is forthcoming with Oxford University Press.

David Braddon-Mitchell is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Sydney; he works in the philosophy of mind, metaphysics, and metaethics, and has published in these areas in various journals including Mind, The Journal of Philosophy, Noûs, Philosophical Studies, Erkenntnis, and Synthese.

Phillip Bricker is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. He wrote his doctoral dissertation at Princeton University under the direction of David Lewis. He works primarily in metaphysics, especially issues in modality and ontology.

Rachael Briggs splits her time as a research fellow between the Australian National University and Griffith University. Her research interests include formal epistemology, metaphysics (particularly the metaphysics of chance), and preference-satisfaction theories of wellbeing.

John P. Burgess is the John N. Woodhull Professor of Philosophy at Princeton University, where he has taught since 1975. He is author or co-author of eight books and scores of papers and reviews in logic and related areas of philosophy.

John Collins completed a PhD at Princeton under David Lewis's supervision. He is Associate Professor of Philosophy at Columbia University. His current research centers on the nature of simple belief, the role of modal principles in epistemology, the foundations of causal decision theory, and the metaphysics of dispositions.

M. Eddon is an Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. Her primary area of research is metaphysics, with interests in fundamentality, quantity, mereology, and intrinsicity.

Alan Hájek is Professor of Philosophy at the Australian National University (since 2005). He works mainly in formal epistemology, the philosophical foundations of probability, decision theory, philosophy of science, metaphilosophy, philosophical logic, and philosophy of religion. He received his PhD at Princeton University, and worked for 12 years at Caltech.

Ned Hall teaches philosophy at Harvard University, and works primarily on topics in metaphysics and epistemology that overlap with philosophy of science (causation, laws of nature, objective chance and its relation to credence – all the fun stuff, in other words).

Katherine Hawley is Professor of Philosophy at the University of St Andrews, Scotland. She is the author of How Things Persist (Oxford University Press 2001) and of Trust: A Very Short Introduction (Oxford University Press 2012), as well as numerous papers within metaphysics and beyond.

Christopher Hitchcock is Professor of Philosophy at the California Institute of Technology. He has published extensively on the topic of causation, including articles in most of the leading philosophy journals, as well as venues in computer science, law, and psychology. He is also the co-editor of the Oxford Handbook of Causation.

Richard Holton is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Cambridge and a fellow of Peterhouse. He works in many different fields, and is the author of Willing, Wanting, Waiting.

Jenann Ismael is a Professor of Philosophy at the University of Arizona. She has published two books and numerous articles. Her research focuses on issues related to philosophy of physics including the nature of space and time, what quantum phenomena are telling us about the world, how fundamental ontology relates to higher level structures, and how we ourselves fit into the natural order.

Simon Keller is Professor of Philosophy at Victoria University of Wellington. He has published widely on topics in ethics and political philosophy. He is the author of The Limits of Loyalty and Partiality.

Rae Langton is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Cambridge. She works in ethics, metaphysics, feminist philosophy, and a range of other areas. She is author of Kantian Humility: Our Ignorance of Things in Themselves (Oxford University Press 1998) and Sexual Solipsism: Philosophical Essays on Pornography and Objectification (Oxford University Press 2009).

Ernie Lepore is Professor of Philosophy and Cognitive Science at Rutgers University. He has published in philosophy of language and philosophy of mind.

Stephanie R. Lewis taught philosophy from 1971 until 1984. When she realized that a tenured job was a complete impossibility, she went to Wharton and got an MBA. She has worked in public finance since then; nonetheless she is a philosopher first and last.

Fraser MacBride is Professor of Logic & Rhetoric at Glasgow University. He works on metaphysics and the philosophy of mathematics and is writing a book on the history of analytic philosophy. His recent publications include "How Involved Do You Want to Be in a Non-Symmetric Relationship?," Australasian Journal of Philosophy.

C.J.G. Meacham is an Associate Professor of Philosophy at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. His main interests are in formal epistemology, decision theory, and the philosophy of physics.

Kristie Miller is an Associate Professor of Philosophy in the Department of Philosophy at the University of Sydney, Australia. She works primarily in metaphysics, in particular on the nature of time and persistence. Her most recent work focuses on the intersection of agency and timelessness.

Daniel Nolan is Professor of Philosophy at the Australian National University. He is the author of Topics in the Philosophy of Possible Worlds (Routledge) and David Lewis (Acumen/McGill-Queens), and articles in journals including Noûs, Philosophy and Phenomenological Research, Philosophical Studies, and Analysis. He works primarily in metaphysics.

Barbara H. Partee is Distinguished University Professor Emerita of Linguistics and Philosophy at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. Her research centers on formal semantics; she is writing a book on the history of formal semantics. She also teaches semantics in Moscow and has worked with Russian colleagues on Slavic semantics.

Robert Pasnau is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Colorado. He works in the areas of metaphysics and knowledge, and especially the history of these subjects. He is the editor of Oxford Studies in Medieval Philosophy.

Peter Railton is Perrin Professor of Philosophy at the University of Michigan. David Lewis was his thesis supervisor. Railton's primary research has been in the philosophy of science, moral philosophy, and aesthetics. Facts, Values, and Norms (Cambridge University Press 2003) collects some of his papers in ethics and metaethics.

Craig Roberts is Professor of Linguistics and Adjunct Professor of Philosophy at the Ohio State University. Her work in formal semantics and pragmatics focuses on the nature of the context of utterance and the pragmatics of questions, presupposition, modals and attitude predicates, anaphora and reference, and their interactions in discourse.
