

A Novel Idea

Researching Transformative Learning in Fiction

Randee Lipson Lawrence and Patricia Cranton

SensePublishers

The background of the cover features a dense array of fiber optic cables. The cables are in various colors, including blue, purple, orange, and yellow. They are arranged in a way that creates a sense of depth and movement, with many cables curving and bending. Small, bright points of light are visible at the ends of the cables, suggesting data transmission or connectivity. The overall effect is a complex, interconnected network of light and color.

A Novel Idea

A Novel Idea

Researching Transformative Learning in Fiction

Randee Lipson Lawrence

National Louis University, Chicago, USA

and

Patricia Cranton

University of New Brunswick, Canada

SENSE PUBLISHERS
ROTTERDAM/BOSTON/TAIPEI

A C.I.P. record for this book is available from the Library of Congress.

ISBN: 978-94-6300-035-2 (paperback)

ISBN: 978-94-6300-036-9 (hardback)

ISBN: 978-94-6300-037-6 (e-book)

Published by: Sense Publishers,
P.O. Box 21858,
3001 AW Rotterdam,
The Netherlands
<https://www.sensepublishers.com/>

Printed on acid-free paper

All Rights Reserved © 2015 Sense Publishers

No part of this work may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, microfilming, recording or otherwise, without written permission from the Publisher, with the exception of any material supplied specifically for the purpose of being entered and executed on a computer system, for exclusive use by the purchaser of the work.

The dialogues in this book are based on the main characters of the six novels we read. We recognize that these characters are the creation of the authors of the novels. We created the dialogues upon on how we assumed they might respond. Any material quoted directly from the novels is cited and referenced in an endnote.

To the memory of Jack and Edee Mezirow

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xi
1: The Setting
Multiple and Complementary Perspectives on Transformative Learning	1
Using Fiction to Understand Transformative Learning	2
2: The Quest
Fiction as data	3
Collaborative Inquiry	4
Creating Dialogues	5
3: Point of View: The Novels
Accidental Tourist by Anne Tyler (1985, New York: Alfred A. Knopf)	7
Middlesex by Jeffrey Eugenides (2002, New York: Farrar, Straus and Giroux)	8
The Cameraman by Bill Gaston (1994, Toronto: Macmillan Canada)	10
The Color Purple by Alice Walker (1982, New York: Washington Square Press)	11
I Still Dream About You by Fannie Flagg (2011, New York: Ballantine Books)	13
A Thousand Splendid Suns by Khaled Hosseini (2007, New York: River head Books)	15
4: The Butterfly Cafe: Dialogues
Day One: Traumatic Events	17
Day Two: Cultural Norms	23
Day Three: Relationships	28
Day Four: Identity	39
Day Five: Consciousness and Reality	46
Day Six: Standing Up for One's Self	53
Day Seven: Reflecting on the Dialogues	58

TABLE OF CONTENTS

5: The Resolution
Catalyst	63
Delaying Influences	65
Encouraging Influences	68
Becoming Conscious	71
Transformative Growth	72
Summary	74
6: Denouement
Catalyst	75
Becoming Conscious	75
Transformative Growth	76
Advancing Theory and Research	76
7: Retrospective
Final Thoughts	86
About the Authors	87
References	89
Index	91

PREFACE

This book is a result of a research project designed to explore how transformative learning is reflected in fiction and how fiction portrays life journeys that include transformative experiences. We (Ranee and Patricia) first discovered our mutual interest in arts-based learning and research through photography. We both enjoy photography, especially abstract and unusual photographs of ordinary situations (a close-up of a flower from the perspective of underneath the flower, for example). We exchanged photographs and talked about our photographs. From there, we decided to look at transformative learning through the lens of photography, and using photography as a metaphor for understanding different perspectives. During our conversations about photography, we also learned that we both enjoyed reading fiction, and we began to talk about how transformative learning was so often reflected in fiction. We decided to read some of the same novels and talk about transformative learning in relation to the experiences of the characters in the novels. This was the beginning of what eventually led to this book. At first, we thought of writing an article, but the project soon grew beyond the boundaries of an article, so we turned to thinking about the possibility of a book. Gradually, the shape of a book took place, and with the support of Sense Publishers, we developed our work into a manuscript that explored transformative learning through the eyes of the fictional characters (our research participants) in the novels we selected.

Our research participants are seven diverse characters from six contemporary novels. Our research data is their stories. Rather than write about the novels in a way that distanced us as researchers from the lives of the people in the novels, we chose to speak using the voices of the characters in dialogue with each other. Through an extensive and careful use of notes on the novels, synopses of the stories, and bringing in quotes from the novels, we tried to stay true to the characters' ways of speaking, their values, and their experiences.

The first part of the book introduces the project and provides a theoretical background on transformative and arts-based learning. We describe how we analyzed and interpreted the novels and the experiences of the participants. We then go on to give a synopsis of each of the six novels. We present the research findings in the form of dialogues between the two of us and the seven characters. As the characters engage with us and with each other on the themes of the research, the readers are afforded an inside view into how transformation took place in the lives of these characters. The themes include: traumatic events or turning points that were catalysts for transformation, cultural norms that delay transformation, relationships that help facilitate or inhibit transformation, and outcomes of transformative learning including, identity shifts, raised consciousness, and learning to stand up for oneself. The readers are also witness to our thought processes as we attempt to make sense of what we are learning through interactive debriefing session after each dialogue.

PREFACE

In this way the research process is made transparent. We go on to an expanded discussion of transformative learning theory and practice based on what we've learned from the dialogues. This leads to a model of transformative learning based on what we learned in this project; we connect our model to the existing theoretical perspectives on transformative learning. Finally, we include our individual and collective reflections in the form of a dialogue between us.