

The History of Visual Magic in Computers

How Beautiful Images are Made in CAD, 3D, VR and AR

The History of Visual Magic in Computers

Jon Peddie

The History of Visual Magic in Computers

How Beautiful Images are Made in CAD, 3D, VR and AR

Jon Peddie Jon Peddie Research Tiburon, CA USA

ISBN 978-1-4471-4931-6 ISBN 978-1-4471-4932-3 (eBook) DOI 10.1007/978-1-4471-4932-3 Springer London Heidelberg New York Dordrecht

Library of Congress Control Number: 2013939972

© Springer-Verlag London 2013

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are reserved by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed. Exempted from this legal reservation are brief excerpts in connection with reviews or scholarly analysis or material supplied specifically for the purpose of being entered and executed on a computer system, for exclusive use by the purchaser of the work. Duplication of this publication or parts thereof is permitted only under the provisions of the Copyright Law of the Publisher's location, in its current version, and permission for use must always be obtained from Springer. Permissions for use may be obtained through RightsLink at the Copyright Clearance Center. Violations are liable to prosecution under the respective Copyright Law.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use.

While the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication, neither the authors nor the editors nor the publisher can accept any legal responsibility for any errors or omissions that may be made. The publisher makes no warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein.

Cover Design Images:

Whirlwind photograph is courtesy of MIT SRC7 convertible image is courtesy of Lightwork Design. Copyright Kheang Chrun Nvidia's 'Dawn' image is courtesy of Nvidia zStation image is ©Infinite Z

Printed on acid-free paper

Springer is part of Springer Science+Business Media (www.springer.com)

Foreword I

The human visual system enables us to see a world of colour, texture and motion. Using two eyes we have an appreciation of depth in the field of view – thus enabling us to appreciate the three dimensions of the space, or scene, around us. However, the complexities of the operation of our visual system are still far from understood. Are we passive recipients of visual stimuli which we interpret according to our experience of the real world, or are we active processors of visual information over which we are exerting some degree of control? Current research is seeking to find answers to this question.

In general, considerations of 3D computer graphics do not involve the deeper questions of the human visual system. However, it is important to recognise that when graphical information is displayed, it is the human visual system that is interpreting it [1, 5].

This book traces the development of 3D computer graphics in terms of hardware, software, techniques and applications – by a key graphics pioneer who has been involved with the field from the beginning. The key milestones are clearly set out, enabling the reader to understand the significance of the developments that took place.

Computers have been used to draw pictures from the earliest days. Researchers were therefore able to use computer generated output in papers and publications. It gave the impression of authority and authenticity. However, such representations are entirely dependent on the underlying data and the representations that have been chosen. It is well known that either or both of these may not be correct or appropriate (as was already known for statistical data), so visual information has to be treated with caution [7, 13].

Complex ideas can be quickly conveyed using a picture. Painters have used a variety of methods to produce images that are able to convey 3D scene and context, and even motion and emotion. To create an impression of depth in the picture, various foreshortening techniques have been used. Many of these are not necessarily strictly geometric but the eye interprets the picture more or less in the way the painter intended. It is postulated that the great artists had a gift for understanding how their art should be constructed in order to generate the effect they desired it to have on the viewer.

Computers process data, but as Hamming [6] noted – "The purpose of computing is insight not numbers". Pictures are able to represent complex information which would take considerable time to express in words or numbers. In short, a picture can be worth a thousand words (assuming of course that the visual representation is not misleading!).

vi Foreword I

Outputting pictures using various devices is one thing, but interacting with pictures is quite another, as this implies interacting with the underlying program and data which control the picture. This was not an easy task for the first computers [10].

With the increase in power of workstations and displays it became relatively easy to handle three or more dimensions. Interaction does enable 3D models and objects to be manipulated directly by the user, and enables the user to appreciate the 3D nature of the data, even though the representation on the screen is in 2D (unless stereo is being used, for example).

The rate of general development in computer processing power has been encapsulated in Moore's law [8]. It has been observed that developments in computer hardware result in twice the power for the same price over a period of 1–2 years. This applies to central processing capability, memory and also networking and telecommunications. It also applies to devices where computer-related technology is utilized, such as the number and size of pixels in digital cameras. Thus digital photographs and videos increase in resolution and realism, and are able to consume the ever increasing amounts of storage now available at continually reducing cost!

It is predicted that there must be some limit to the number of components that can be put into an integrated circuit, since ultimately the size of atoms and the speed of light appear to be fundamental barriers. Thus the processes of ever finer photolithography to produce the circuits will reach their limit. However, silicon is just the current technology and it is surmised that other technologies may supercede it when silicon has run its course, such as optical, quantum or DNA computing, which could enable Moore's law to continue into the indefinite future.

Pioneers of computer graphics have noted the "wheel of reincarnation" that has taken place in the architecture of systems that support computer graphics. This began with considering the best way to couple a display to a computer [3, 9]. Building more functionality into the display in order to make it run faster resulted in the display becoming a self-contained computer in its own right, which in turn generated a further cycle which repeated the first.

This book notes that what may be regarded as the centre of gravity of computer processing of information has moved from the main frame to the display device and back again. Supercomputers have been used to generate vast amounts of data for computer simulations, and at the other end of the scale the personal computer has been equipped with more powerful processors and graphics cards to improve its performance with the real-time display of computer games and movies. Now the desk top is moving into the cloud – with the availability of fast network links and massive low-cost servers, which are increasingly zero-cost to the user (at least for normal amounts of storage).

The interfaces to the earliest computers were difficult to use. Punched paper tape and punched cards had to be input, programs compiled, then the data was fed in. Memory and software limitations made input and output a time-consuming process. However, as processor and memory capabilities increased, so did the overall usability. The advent of time sharing enabled users to have a greater degree of direct interaction with the computer and obtain computed results in near real-time. These results could also be displayed graphically either on a terminal or graphics display. Thus the computer moved from being considered solely as a numerical processing machine to a more general form which could process symbols and visual information. Of course, the latter needed appropriate forms of digital representation in order to be processed, but higher-level functions provided this.

Foreword I vii

Sequences of pictures could also be generated which conveyed the impression of movement when viewed as a movie. Thus computer animation became a discipline in its own right – pushing back the frontiers of algorithms and techniques to generate special effects of the kind seen in today's movies. Such techniques could also be used in simulations of physical processes in order to obtain a greater understanding of the natural world. Simulations can also be used in training procedures which generate artificial situations analogous to those in real-life to enable responses to be practiced in safety. Flight simulators are a good example of this.

It is clear that in some instances developments have been constrained by the available technology. For example, WIMP (windows, icons, point-and-click devices) graphical user interfaces could only become significant when both screens and software had sufficient capability and speed to allow user interaction to take place at reasonable rates. Speed relied in turn upon the underlying hardware and the connectivity between the central processor and the display device. One can also take the view that such developments could have restricted more open thinking about optimum interfaces for the future. WIMP graphical user interfaces that arose in desktop and mouse computing environments only use human vision of what is on the screen and a touch of the mouse or keyboard, and are essentially 2D in nature. Using other human sensory channels is not easy to accommodate, resulting in a user interface that is unnatural as far as normal human-human interaction is concerned. Future work needs to include a better match to the human's ability to process multisensory, multi-channel, data and to operate naturally in a 3D environment [12].

In parallel with the developments in computers and computer graphics which could be said to be "in your face", there is also the current trend towards ubiquitous, or seamless, computing. This is computing which is more or less invisible by embedding it into objects and the real-world environment, and even in clothes and people. Smart sensors are programmed to monitor data without human intervention, and produce appropriate responses automatically. Cars are estimated to have somewhere between 50 and 100 microprocessors installed to control the various active and passive monitoring functions of the car's operation. Many of these generate an effect on the 3D environment within the vehicle, or outside it.

3D computer graphics has been an exciting field over the last 50 years or so. Many books, proceedings, and conferences have been devoted to it. This book charts the excitement that the field has generated by the work of hardware designers, software developers, and users alike.

So – what challenges remain?

Sutherland [11] proposed ten unsolved problems in computer graphics. By 1998 there were at least ten more [2], and by 2000 there were at least ten problems left

viii Foreword I

[4]. In short, as the field expands, more and more problems and challenges remain to be addressed.

This book therefore provides a great opportunity to learn from the past and apply it to the future.

Rae Earnshaw Computer Graphics Pioneer (elected 1987) Professor of Creative Industries, Glyndwr University, UK Emeritus Professor of Electronic Imaging, University of Bradford, UK

References

- 1. Berger, J. (1977). Ways of seeing. London: British Broadcasting Corporation and Penguin Books.
- Blinn, J. F. (1998). Ten more unsolved problems in computer graphics. IEEE Computer Graphics and Applications, 18(5), 86–89. http://ieeexplore.ieee.org/stamp/stamp.jsp?tp=& arnumber=708564.
- 3. Clark, J. H. (1985). Graphics software standards and their evolution with hardware algorithms. In R. A. Earnshaw (Ed.), Fundamental algorithms for computer graphics, NATO ASI series (Vol. F17, pp. 619–629).
- 4. Foley, J. D. (2000). Getting there: The top ten problems left. IEEE Computer Graphics and Applications, 20(1), 66–68. http://ieeexplore.ieee.org/stamp/stamp.jsp?tp=&arnumber= 814569.
- 5. Gregory, R. L. (1990). Eye and brain, the psychology of seeing. Princeton: Princeton University Press.
- Hamming, R. W. (1962). Numerical methods for scientists and engineers. New York: McGraw-Hill.
- Ingo, H. (2003). Misleading visualizations. http://avoinelama.fi/hingo/kirjoituksia/misleadingvisualizations.html, http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Misleading_graph.
- Moore, G. E. (1965, April 19). Cramming more components onto integrated circuits. Electronics Magazine, 38(8), 114–117. http://download.intel.com/museum/Moores_Law/Articles-Press_Releases/Gordon_Moore_1965_Article.pdf.
- 9. Myer, T. H., & Sutherland, I. E. (1968). On the design of display processors. Communications of the ACM, 11(6), 410–414. http://dl.acm.org/citation.cfm?id=363368.
- Sutherland, I. E. (1963). Sketchpad: A man-machine graphical communication system (courtesy Computer Laboratory, University of Cambridge UCAM-CL-TR-574 September 2003).
   Massachusetts Institute of Technology. http://www.cl.cam.ac.uk/techreports/UCAM-CL-TR-574.pdf.
- 11. Sutherland, I. E. (1996, May). Ten unsolved problems in computer graphics. Datamation, 12(5), 22–27.
- 12. van Dam, A. (2000). Beyond WIMP. IEEE Computer Graphics and Applications, 20(1), 50–51. http://ieeexplore.ieee.org/stamp/stamp.jsp?tp=&arnumber=814559.
- 13. Wainer, H. Visual revelations: Graphical tales of fate and deception from Napoleon Bonaparte to Ross Perot. New York: Psychology Press. ISBN 978-0-8058-3878-7.

Foreword II

 $\mathbf{Z}$

This is a book about the letter "Z". That thing we call the "z-axis", which adds a third dimension. For most of us, we figured out at a young age how to draw squares, triangles, and circles, and we managed to get through geometry, in about the ninth grade – but then along came those pesky cubes, pyramids, and spheres, and our math capabilities skidded to a stop.

When it comes to "Z", we're not even sure how to pronounce the letter – even in English, let alone other languages – where we struggle between "zee" and "zed". And why the Brits use "organise" instead of "organize" confuses further... Why we use "measure" instead of "meazure", or conversely, "azure" instead of "asure"; and "freeze/froze/frozen" in the same way we use "chose/chose/chosen" is beyond me...

For readers interested in computer graphics and display technologies, we are already accustomed to such confusion. After all, for generations we've blithely accepted as "standard" measures refresh rates of 29.97 frames per second, image heights of 486 lines (or is it 483 lines? Er, maybe it's 480 lines), sampling every other scan line at different times (interlacing), doing matrix arithmetic on nonlinearly encoded color signals... Huh?

Centuries ago, we switched from a Greek alphabet starting with alpha and ending with omega – we now use an expanded alphabet that starts with A and ends with Z. Still, now long after we expanded from omega to zed, our use of the letter Z is anything but common. Z is our least used letter of the alphabet, and we use it interchangeably with other sounds, like g, j, si, ts, and x. Somewhat similarly, we are now in the final stages of shifting the world of displays from analog to digital solutions – an enormous change.

This book helps us churn through the history behind such esoteric calculations, enabling us to understand the technology limitations that resulted in the graphics solutions and displays we now use. For many reasons, the history of graphics and displays diverged as the two major industries using the technologies grew – TVs and PCs came up with significantly different solutions, resulting recently in a collision (or should it be "collizion"?) between the two markets.

This collision, (often called convergence), leaves us inevitably to the intriguing notion that our TV display devices will serve as a computer monitor, just as our PC display entertains us with TV output. And then there's "Z" – creating big questions about how stereoscopic technologies will similarly converge across platforms that still offer fundamentally different usage models. Our PCs tend to be single-user, single-view devices; while our TVs tend to be multi-user, multi-view devices – a factor that dramatically transforms the display technology solutions that enable the z-dimension.

x Foreword II

Many commentators in the media today are fond of questioning the need for the z-dimension in the market for flat panel displays. Indeed, creating three dimensional images using a 2-dimensional surface is highly problematic. Today's 3D rendering solutions are simply amazing – creating depth cues that are simply amazing – to the point that some suggest that stereoscopic 3D display solutions are simply not necessary.

One of the most common uses of the letter Z is to represent the act of sleeping (zzzz)... Interestingly, it's still a topic of tremendous debate as to whether we dream in 3D or in 2D. Can our mind form the dual views necessary for stereopsis – or do our eyes need to be part of the 3D experience?

The human visual system is based on the placement of our two eyes – and this binocular anatomy defines a stereo world. No matter how good 3D rendering algorithms become, they will always fail to replicate the world we actually see. Accordingly, 3D displays are inevitable, regardless of the skepticism of so many in the media.

This book does an amazing job of identifying the history behind 3D graphics and 3D displays. While the past fascinates, the truly evocative thing about this book is that it identifies that while the technologies are steadily evolving – such that there is no question that 3D visualization techniques and technologies will increasingly become a part of our future.

Austin, TX, USA Mark Fihn

Preface

If you ever looked at a fantastic adventure or science fiction movie, or an amazingly complex and rich computer game, or a TV commercial where cars or gas pumps or biscuits behaved liked people and wondered, "How do they do that" then you've experienced the magic of 3D generated by a computer.

The dedication of this book is to the thousands of people over thousands of years who developed the building blocks and made the discoveries in mathematics, science, and computers that make such 3D magic possible.

Dedications and Acknowledgements

Although mostly linear in its evolution, 3D in computers has come about through multiple disciplines and mutually dependent lines of development. The improvements in processors, memory, displays, input devices, operating systems, drivers and APIs, applications, and software development tools have all moved in parallel and sometimes dependently on each other.

With such a broad scope as the goal of this book you will have to accept that it would be impossible to thoroughly and extensively cover all the richness of all the topics. With that disclaimer let me also apologize to anyone or any organizations I failed to cover in this book. Moreover, anyone who feels I did miss something or someone important please send a note to me about it with that information, this won't be the last book I write, and who knows, we might even have a second edition...

A Side Note—Lawyers

Except for their mothers, not many people like lawyers. In the last decade or two a new group of lawyers has cropped up—the intellectual property (IP) harvesters. These are lawyers, who make deals with patent holders, the IP owners, to pursue violators of their IP. Sometimes the deals involve the lawyers buying the IP. It's <sup>1&</sup>quot;3D" means a geometric model using three dimensions to describe it. It is not the same as a stereovision "3D movie". We refer to stereovision 3D as "S3D" to distinguish it.

xii Preface

a questionable practice and in my opinion one that has been abused. However, it has had an interesting beneficial side effect—it has created historians out of many technologists as they try to trace the origins of IP to defend their inventions and discoveries. These technologists come in three forms, the defendant, the plaintiff, and the expert witness, and all three of them have, and still are, digging through old notebooks, patents, and conducting interviews. In addition, a great deal of that work has thankfully turned up on the web. Therefore, I must give a begrudging note of thanks to the IP lawyers for being the catalyst for a lot of really important research and the rescuing of potentially lost history.

The Inventors, Discoverers, and Architects

As we trace the origins of the developments of 3D on computers, we find that in the very early times an individual was the discoverer of a concept, a law of science, or a novel idea. As we move from the industrial revolution to the computer age, the individual starts to become more difficult to identify, and the credit for a development or discovery goes to the organization. No doubt in the past several people worked on problems but usually only one person got credit for it. Today the teams are so big it's almost impossible to find the person responsible for the original idea.

Compounding the problem is that some of the developments are so large and complex the discoverer can't be the implementer.

This then is a bit of an apology to those creative, imaginative, and certainly hard working individuals that have contributed to the developments I have listed in this book. If your name isn't mentioned it's my fault for not digging deeper or harder. In addition, if you would like to tell me of your contributions and accomplishments, I warmly and strongly encourage you to do so.

No Plotters

Even though I got my official introduction to computer graphics by working on the design of a large lofting flatbed plotter at Litton Industries that we delivered to Ford in 1963, I have not included plotters in this discussion about 3D in computers. It was a difficult decision and the many people who helped develop the plotter industry may criticize me for it—my apologies to them. My rationale is that a plotter produces a non-interactive, flat, static 2D representation of a model or image. Whereas it can be argued that a display also produces a flat 2D representation, the difference (in my mind at least) is that the display can be interactive and can bring the viewer to a state of suspended disbelief.<sup>2</sup>

&lt;sup>2</sup>Suspension of disbelief is a term coined in 1817 by the poet and aesthetic philosopher Samuel Taylor Coleridge, who suggested that if a writer could infuse a "human interest and a semblance of truth" into a fantastic tale, the reader would suspend judgment concerning the implausibility of the narrative. Today we suspend disbelief when we play a game or watch a computer generated movie, but only if the artifacts of the creation are not apparent.

Preface xiii

The other argument for including a plotter could be the development of 3D plotters using sintering techniques for rapid prototyping. Whereas this does produce a physically tangible 3D model, it still is just a static representation, and so I have excused myself from discussing it in this book.

Jon Peddie Research Tiburon, CA, USA Jon Peddie

Contents

1	Intro	duction
	1.1	Introduction
	1.2	Geometry and Art
	1.3	The History of Visual Magic in Computers
	1.4	Looking Forward
	1.5	Computer Graphics References and Links to Resources
		1.5.1 May the Pixel Be with You
2	Getti	ng to 3D
	2.1	Introduction
	2.2	The Foundation of 3D
	2.3	The Calendar
		2.3.1 Notation
	2.4	The First $3D - \sim 5000 - 3000$ BCE
	2.5	Learning to Count (2500–500 BCE)
	2.6	Numbering System (5000–460 BCE)
		2.6.1 Panini (520–460 BCE)
	2.7	Geometry (600–300 BCE)
		2.7.1 Thales of Miletos (624–546 BCE)
		2.7.2 Pythagoras of Samos (Greek: 580–490 BCE)
		2.7.3 Euclid of Alexandria (323–283 BCE)
	2.8	Zero – Where Would We Be Without It? (300 BCE)
	2.9	Apollonius of Perga (262–190 BCE), and Conic Sections
	2.10	Matrix Math (100 BCE)
		2.10.1 Jiu Zhang Suan Shu (100 BCE–50 CE)
		2.10.2 Father of the Negative Number?
	2.11	3D Math (50 CE)
		2.11.1 Heron of Alexandria (10 CE–70 CE),
		the Father of 3D?
	2.12	The Beginnings of Algebra: Cubic Equation (10–1080)
		2.12.1 Omar Khayyam (1048–1131 CE)
	2.13	The Renaissance (1300–1600)
	2.14	3D Perspective and Coordinate Systems (1400–1600)
		2.14.1 Filippo Brunelleschi (1377–1446)

xvi Contents

2.14.2 Piero della Francesca (1412–1492) 2.14.3 René Descartes (1596–1650). 2.14.4 James Joseph Sylvester (1814–1897) Matrix Notation  2.15 Epilogue
2.14.4 James Joseph Sylvester (1814–1897) Matrix Notation  2.15 Epilogue  Appendix  A.1 Math History  References  3 Developing the 3D Software  3.1 Introduction  3.2 Synthesizing 3D in Computers (1959–···)  3.2.1 Developing the Math  3.2.2 Using the Math  3.3.3 Generating the Image  3.3.1 Normals  3.3.2 Flat, Phong and Gouraud Shading (1971~1974)  3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978)  3.3.4 Image Filtering  3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980)  3.3.6 Human Skin  3.3.7 3D Art  3.4 Summary  Appendix  A.1 SIGGRAPH
2.15 Epilogue Appendix A.1 Math History References  3 Developing the 3D Software 3.1 Introduction 3.2 Synthesizing 3D in Computers (1959-···) 3.2.1 Developing the Math 3.2.2 Using the Math 3.3.3 Generating the Image. 3.3.1 Normals 3.3.2 Flat, Phong and Gouraud Shading (1971~1974) 3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978) 3.3.4 Image Filtering. 3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980) 3.3.6 Human Skin 3.3.7 3D Art 3.4 Summary Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH
Appendix  A.1 Math History  References  3 Developing the 3D Software  3.1 Introduction  3.2 Synthesizing 3D in Computers (1959)  3.2.1 Developing the Math  3.2.2 Using the Math  3.3 Generating the Image.  3.3.1 Normals  3.3.2 Flat, Phong and Gouraud Shading (1971~1974)  3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978)  3.3.4 Image Filtering.  3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980)  3.3.6 Human Skin  3.3.7 3D Art  3.4 Summary  Appendix  A.1 SIGGRAPH
A.1 Math History References  3 Developing the 3D Software  3.1 Introduction 3.2 Synthesizing 3D in Computers (1959) 3.2.1 Developing the Math 3.2.2 Using the Math 3.3.3 Generating the Image 3.3.1 Normals 3.3.2 Flat, Phong and Gouraud Shading (1971~1974) 3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978) 3.3.4 Image Filtering 3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980) 3.3.6 Human Skin 3.3.7 3D Art  3.4 Summary Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH
References  3.1 Introduction 3.2 Synthesizing 3D in Computers (1959) 3.2.1 Developing the Math 3.2.2 Using the Math 3.3.3 Generating the Image 3.3.1 Normals 3.3.2 Flat, Phong and Gouraud Shading (1971~1974) 3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978) 3.3.4 Image Filtering 3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980) 3.3.6 Human Skin 3.3.7 3D Art  3.4 Summary Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH
3.1 Introduction 3.2 Synthesizing 3D in Computers (1959) 3.2.1 Developing the Math 3.2.2 Using the Math 3.3.1 Normals 3.3.2 Flat, Phong and Gouraud Shading (1971~1974) 3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978) 3.3.4 Image Filtering. 3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980) 3.3.6 Human Skin 3.3.7 3D Art  3.4 Summary Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH
3.1 Introduction 3.2 Synthesizing 3D in Computers (1959) 3.2.1 Developing the Math 3.2.2 Using the Math 3.3.3 Generating the Image 3.3.1 Normals 3.3.2 Flat, Phong and Gouraud Shading (1971~1974) 3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978) 3.3.4 Image Filtering 3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980) 3.3.6 Human Skin 3.3.7 3D Art  3.4 Summary  Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH
3.1 Introduction 3.2 Synthesizing 3D in Computers (1959) 3.2.1 Developing the Math 3.2.2 Using the Math 3.3.3 Generating the Image 3.3.1 Normals 3.3.2 Flat, Phong and Gouraud Shading (1971~1974) 3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978) 3.3.4 Image Filtering 3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980) 3.3.6 Human Skin 3.3.7 3D Art  3.4 Summary  Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH
3.2 Synthesizing 3D in Computers (1959) 3.2.1 Developing the Math 3.2.2 Using the Math 3.3 Generating the Image. 3.3.1 Normals 3.3.2 Flat, Phong and Gouraud Shading (1971~1974) 3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978) 3.3.4 Image Filtering. 3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980) 3.3.6 Human Skin 3.3.7 3D Art  3.4 Summary  Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH
3.2.1 Developing the Math 3.2.2 Using the Math 3.3 Generating the Image 3.3.1 Normals 3.3.2 Flat, Phong and Gouraud Shading (1971~1974) 3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978) 3.3.4 Image Filtering 3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980) 3.3.6 Human Skin 3.3.7 3D Art 3.4 Summary Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH
3.2.2 Using the Math  3.3 Generating the Image.  3.3.1 Normals.  3.3.2 Flat, Phong and Gouraud Shading (1971~1974)  3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978)  3.3.4 Image Filtering.  3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980).  3.3.6 Human Skin.  3.3.7 3D Art.  3.4 Summary.  Appendix  A.1 SIGGRAPH.
3.3 Generating the Image.  3.3.1 Normals.  3.3.2 Flat, Phong and Gouraud Shading (1971~1974)  3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978)  3.3.4 Image Filtering.  3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980)  3.3.6 Human Skin.  3.3.7 3D Art.  3.4 Summary.  Appendix  A.1 SIGGRAPH.
3.3.1 Normals  3.3.2 Flat, Phong and Gouraud Shading (1971~1974)  3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978)  3.3.4 Image Filtering.  3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980)  3.3.6 Human Skin  3.3.7 3D Art  3.4 Summary  Appendix  A.1 SIGGRAPH
3.3.2 Flat, Phong and Gouraud Shading (1971~1974) 3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978) 3.3.4 Image Filtering 3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980)
3.3.3 Texture, Bump, and Environment Mapping (1974~1978) 3.3.4 Image Filtering. 3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980). 3.3.6 Human Skin. 3.3.7 3D Art. 3.4 Summary. Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH.
3.3.4 Image Filtering. 3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980). 3.3.6 Human Skin. 3.3.7 3D Art. 3.4 Summary. Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH.
3.3.5 Ray Tracing (1980) 3.3.6 Human Skin 3.3.7 3D Art 3.4 Summary Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH
3.3.6 Human Skin 3.3.7 3D Art  3.4 Summary Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH
3.3.7 3D Art 3.4 Summary Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH
3.4 Summary Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH
Appendix A.1 SIGGRAPH
A.1 SIGGRAPH
1 1
8 · F
Developing the Applications
4 Developing the Applications
4.1 Introduction
4.2 Playing Around
4.2.1 First Electromechanical Game Playing
Computer (1940)
4.2.2 Missile Simulation Game 1947
4.2.3 First Interactive Computer Game 1949
4.2.4 NIMROD, the First Electronic Game
Computer (1951)
4.2.5 Computer Chess Program (1951)
4.2.6 First Video Game on a Computer (1952)
4.2.7 First (Analog) Computer Game (1958)
4.2.8 First Digital Graphics Computer Game (1962)
4.2.9 Games Led to UNIX (1969)
4.2.10 The Origin of Video Arcade Games (1971)
4.2.11 The First 3D Multiplayer Game (1974)

Contents xvii

		4.2.13	The First Arcade 3D Game (1983)	96
		4.2.14	First 3D FPS on a PC (1992)	96
	4.3	Getting	Serious (1962)	97
		4.3.1	Sketchpad (1963)	98
	4.4	Comput	ter Graphics	101
	4.5	CAD th	e Daddy of It All	102
		4.5.1	GM the Daddy of CAD (1958)	103
		4.5.2	MIT	103
		4.5.3	CAD Explodes	104
	4.6	Molecu	lar Modeling (1964)	106
	4.7	Simulat	ion, Visualization, Modeling, and Virtualization	107
		4.7.1	Simulate – Save Lives	110
		4.7.2	Visualizing a Virtual Human Body	110
		4.7.3	Not Quite Real Enough	111
		4.7.4	Find Oil, Explode Bombs, Design Wings,
			and Predict Hurricanes	114
	4.8	When Is	s a Simulation/Visualization a Game?	115
		4.8.1	Where Is the Work Done?	119
		4.8.2	Physically Accurate and Tricking the Eye	120
	4.9	Summa	ry	121
	Appe	ndix		122
	Refer	ences		122
5	Deve	loning th	e Computer	125
	5.1		ction	125
	5.2		ustrial Revolution (1740–1880)	127
	5.3		ics (200 BCE–1800)	127
	0.0	5.3.1	The Antikythera Device (80 BCE)	127
		5.3.2	Clocks and Gears (1400 BCE–1240)	129
		5.3.3	The Escapement Mechanism (725–1237 CE)	130
	5.4		ical Computers (1750–1805)	131
		5.4.1	Mechanical Androids Talking, Dancing Dolls	131
		5.4.2	The Jacquard Loom (1801–1805)	132
			Charles Babbage FRS (1791–1871)	133
		5.4.3	Charles Dannage ENG (1/91-10/11	ררו
	5.5	5.4.3 Electric
	5.5	Electric	ity and Electronics (1767–1930)	135
	5.5	Electric 5.5.1	ity and Electronics (1767–1930)	135 136
	5.5	Electric	ity and Electronics (1767–1930)  Benjamin Franklin (1706–1790)  Ferdinand Braun's CRT (1897)	135 136 137
		Electric 5.5.1 5.5.2 5.5.3	ity and Electronics (1767–1930)  Benjamin Franklin (1706–1790)  Ferdinand Braun's CRT (1897)  Nikola Tesla: The Logic Gate (1903)	135 136
	5.5	Electric 5.5.1 5.5.2 5.5.3	ity and Electronics (1767–1930)  Benjamin Franklin (1706–1790)  Ferdinand Braun's CRT (1897)  Nikola Tesla: The Logic Gate (1903)  ctronic Computer Revolution	135 136 137 139
		Electric 5.5.1 5.5.2 5.5.3 The Ele 5.6.1	ity and Electronics (1767–1930)  Benjamin Franklin (1706–1790)  Ferdinand Braun's CRT (1897)  Nikola Tesla: The Logic Gate (1903)  ctronic Computer Revolution  Vannevar Bush (1890–1974)	135 136 137 139 140 140
		Electric 5.5.1 5.5.2 5.5.3 The Ele	ity and Electronics (1767–1930)  Benjamin Franklin (1706–1790)  Ferdinand Braun's CRT (1897)  Nikola Tesla: The Logic Gate (1903)  ctronic Computer Revolution  Vannevar Bush (1890–1974)  The Turing Machine (1936)	135 136 137 139 140
		Electric 5.5.1 5.5.2 5.5.3 The Ele 5.6.1 5.6.2	ity and Electronics (1767–1930)  Benjamin Franklin (1706–1790)  Ferdinand Braun's CRT (1897)  Nikola Tesla: The Logic Gate (1903)  ctronic Computer Revolution  Vannevar Bush (1890–1974)	135 136 137 139 140 140

xviii Contents

	5.6.5	ENIAC Early Programmable Electronic
		Computer (1943–1946)	146
	5.6.6	Whirlwind Computer – The Beginning of Computer Graphics (1949)	148
	5.6.7	SAGE and the Light Gun (1950s)	150
5.7	Early De	evelopments
	5.7.1	IBM 704 First Floating-Point Computer
		(1954–1960)	152
5.8	The Min	nicomputer (1965)	154
	5.8.1	RISC	155
	5.8.2	RISC Minicomputers	156
5.9	The Firs	t Workstation (1959)	157
	5.9.1	The Workstation (1970)	158
	5.9.2	UNIX	159
	5.9.3	The Age of the Workstations (1980)	160
	5.9.4	Workstations Proliferate	161
	5.9.5	Apollo to Tractors	162
	5.9.6	The Democratization of Scientific Computing	166
	5.9.7	Graphics Workstations	167
	5.9.8	Other Graphics Workstations	171
	5.9.9	ACE Consortium Advanced Computing Environment	173
5.10	Microco	omputers (1970–1980)	174
	5.10.1	First Relay-Based PC (1950)	175
	5.10.2	First Vacuum Tube PC (1957)	176
	5.10.3	First Solid-State PC (1970)	177
5.11	The Beg	inning of Video Game Machines (1971)	181
	5.11.1	Video Arcade Machines	181
	5.11.2	Home Console	182
	5.11.3	Handheld Game Consoles	184
	5.11.4	Gaming PCs	186
	5.11.5	Tablets, Phones, and Specialized Devices	186
5.12	3D Is He	ere	190
5.13	Evolutio	on to PCs	191
5.14		Computers Appear	192
5.15		gitizers to Tablet (1880–1970)	195
	5.15.1	Tablets Not a New Idea	196
	5.15.2	Tablets (1980)	197
	5.15.3	Tablet Computers (1990)	198
	5.15.4	Mobile Devices (2000)	199
	5.15.5	Tablets (2010)	200
5.16		Processors Working Together	201
5.17		у	202
			202
11	A. 1	Home and Personal Computers	202
Refer	ences		207

Contents xix

6	The I	Developm	ent of 3D Controllers	211
	6.1	Introduc	tion	211
	6.2	The Hard	dware	213
	6.3	The First	t Generation – Graphics in a Vacuum (1940s–1960s)	214
	6.4		o Digital Transition	215
	6.5		rds to Plug-In Boards (1970s)	216
	6.6	Bus War	rs (1987–1993)	216
		6.6.1	The PCI Bus (1993)	219
	6.7	The Mar	ket Bifurcates	220
		6.7.1	First PC Graphics Board	222
		6.7.2	First Bit-Mapped PC Graphics Board	223
		6.7.3	Professional or High-End Graphics	225
	6.8	Graphics	s Chips Enter the Market (1980s)	229
		6.8.1	The Evolution of PC Graphics Controllers	230
	6.9	The Soft	ware	232
	6.10	API War	'S	233
		6.10.1	Evolution of APIs	237
		6.10.2	Plot 10	237
		6.10.3	CORE	238
		6.10.4	GKS	238
		6.10.5	PHIGS	239
		6.10.6	IRIS GL	239
		6.10.7	DGIS – Direct Graphics Interface Standard	240
		6.10.8	OpenGL	242
	6.11	The PC	API Wars	243
		6.11.1	HOOPS	243
		6.11.2	Reality Lab	243
		6.11.3	VAGI	243
		6.11.4	3DRender	244
		6.11.5	WinG	244
		6.11.6	Glide	244
		6.11.7	Microsoft and DirectX	245
		6.11.8	Apple QuickDraw 3D	246
		6.11.9	The Fahrenheit Project	246
		6.11.10	Quesa Graphics Library	247
		6.11.11	Khronos and OpenGL	248
		6.11.12	DirectX Takes Over	248
		6.11.13	Direct3D	248
		6.11.14	The End of OpenGL?	250
		6.11.15	Mesa	250
		6.11.16	Others	251
		6.11.17	GPU Computing	252
	6.12	The Mar	ket	252
	6.13		yers	252
			Cirrus Logic	253

xx Contents

		6.13.2	Chips and Technologies	253
		6.13.3	ATI Technologies	254
		6.13.4	3Dlabs	260
		6.13.5	S3 Graphics	262
		6.13.6	Nvidia	262
		6.13.7	3Dfx	268
		6.13.8	Intel	269
		6.13.9	Workstation to AIB Company Twists	273
		6.13.10	Apple's QuickDraw 3D Accelerator AIB	274
		6.13.11	Pixel Planes to Talisman to Mobile Phones	274
		6.13.12	Retrofitting Down Falls	275
	6.14	The Mar	ket Explodes Then Implodes	276
		6.14.1	AIB Suppliers	276
		6.14.2	Consolidation	277
		6.14.3	Integration Continues	278
	6.15	PC Grap	hics Trifurcate	278
		6.15.1	The Office	279
		6.15.2	Let the Games Begin	280
	6.16	Summar	y	282
	Appe	ndix		283
		A. 1	Technical Terms	283
	Refer	ences		283
7	Devel	lopment o	of Displays: Getting to See 3D	287
7
	7.1	_	tion
	7.1	_	tion	288
	7.1 7.2	Introduc 7.1.1	Everything Is 3D
		Introduc 7.1.1	Everything Is 3D	288 289
		Introduc 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1	Everything Is 3D	288 289 290
	7.2	Introduc 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1	Everything Is 3D	288 289 290 290
	7.2	Introduc 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1 Displayi	Everything Is 3D	288 289 290 290 291
	7.2	Introduc 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1 Displayi 7.3.1	Father of the Term Pixel (1874)	288 289 290 290 291 296
	7.2	Introduc 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1 Displayi 7.3.1 7.3.2 7.3.3	Everything Is 3D  Father of the Term Pixel (1874)  ng What You Compute  More Than Just Displays  Cold to Hot (1922)	288 289 290 290 291 296 297
	7.2 7.3	Introduc 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1 Displayi 7.3.1 7.3.2 7.3.3	Everything Is 3D  Father of the Term Pixel (1874)  ng What You Compute  More Than Just Displays  Cold to Hot (1922)  The Magnetic Defection CRT (1912)	288 289 290 290 291 296 297 297
	7.2 7.3	Introduce 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1 Displayi 7.3.1 7.3.2 7.3.3 Vector at 7.4.1	Everything Is 3D	288 289 290 290 291 296 297 297 298
	7.2 7.3 7.4	Introduce 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1 Displayi 7.3.1 7.3.2 7.3.3 Vector at 7.4.1	Everything Is 3D  Father of the Term Pixel (1874) ng What You Compute  More Than Just Displays Cold to Hot (1922) The Magnetic Defection CRT (1912) nd Raster  Vector Used for First Computers	288 289 290 290 291 296 297 297 298 299
	7.2 7.3 7.4	Introduce 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1 Displayi 7.3.1 7.3.2 7.3.3 Vector at 7.4.1 The Cold	Everything Is 3D  Father of the Term Pixel (1874) ng What You Compute  More Than Just Displays Cold to Hot (1922) The Magnetic Defection CRT (1912) nd Raster  Vector Used for First Computers d War and Computer Graphics	288 289 290 290 291 296 297 297 298 299 300
	7.2 7.3 7.4	Introduc 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1 Displayi 7.3.1 7.3.2 7.3.3 Vector at 7.4.1 The Cold 7.5.1	Everything Is 3D  Father of the Term Pixel (1874) ng What You Compute More Than Just Displays Cold to Hot (1922) The Magnetic Defection CRT (1912) nd Raster Vector Used for First Computers d War and Computer Graphics Whirlwind Was the First	288 289 290 291 296 297 297 298 299 300 301
	7.2 7.3 7.4	Introduce 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1 Displayi 7.3.1 7.3.2 7.3.3 Vector at 7.4.1 The Cold 7.5.1 7.5.2	Everything Is 3D.  Father of the Term Pixel (1874).  ng What You Compute.  More Than Just Displays.  Cold to Hot (1922).  The Magnetic Defection CRT (1912).  nd Raster.  Vector Used for First Computers.  d War and Computer Graphics  Whirlwind Was the First  The SAGE – Semi-Automatic Ground	288 289 290 291 296 297 297 298 299 300 301
	7.2 7.3 7.4 7.5	Introduce 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1 Displayi 7.3.1 7.3.2 7.3.3 Vector at 7.4.1 The Cold 7.5.1 7.5.2 The Firs 7.6.1	Everything Is 3D  Father of the Term Pixel (1874) ng What You Compute More Than Just Displays Cold to Hot (1922) The Magnetic Defection CRT (1912) nd Raster Vector Used for First Computers d War and Computer Graphics Whirlwind Was the First The SAGE – Semi-Automatic Ground Environment System t Video Display Terminals Plasma Displays (1964)	288 289 290 291 296 297 297 298 299 300 301
	7.2 7.3 7.4 7.5	Introduce 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1 Displayi 7.3.1 7.3.2 7.3.3 Vector at 7.4.1 The Cold 7.5.1 7.5.2 The Firs	Everything Is 3D  Father of the Term Pixel (1874) ng What You Compute More Than Just Displays Cold to Hot (1922) The Magnetic Defection CRT (1912) nd Raster Vector Used for First Computers d War and Computer Graphics Whirlwind Was the First The SAGE – Semi-Automatic Ground Environment System t Video Display Terminals	288 289 290 291 296 297 298 299 300 301 302 307
	7.2 7.3 7.4 7.5	Introduce 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1 Displayi 7.3.1 7.3.2 7.3.3 Vector at 7.4.1 The Cold 7.5.1 7.5.2 The Firs 7.6.1	Everything Is 3D  Father of the Term Pixel (1874) ng What You Compute More Than Just Displays Cold to Hot (1922) The Magnetic Defection CRT (1912) nd Raster Vector Used for First Computers d War and Computer Graphics Whirlwind Was the First The SAGE – Semi-Automatic Ground Environment System t Video Display Terminals Plasma Displays (1964) Graphics Terminals Become Stand-Alone Products (1960s)	288 289 290 291 296 297 298 299 300 301 302 307
	7.2 7.3 7.4 7.5	Introduce 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1 Displayi 7.3.1 7.3.2 7.3.3 Vector at 7.4.1 The Cold 7.5.1 7.5.2 The Firs 7.6.1	Father of the Term Pixel (1874)  ng What You Compute  More Than Just Displays  Cold to Hot (1922)  The Magnetic Defection CRT (1912)  nd Raster  Vector Used for First Computers  d War and Computer Graphics  Whirlwind Was the First  The SAGE – Semi-Automatic Ground  Environment System  t Video Display Terminals  Plasma Displays (1964)  Graphics Terminals Become Stand-Alone	288 289 290 291 296 297 298 299 300 301 302 311 311
	7.2 7.3 7.4 7.5	Introduce 7.1.1 Pixels 7.2.1 Displayi 7.3.1 7.3.2 7.3.3 Vector at 7.4.1 The Cold 7.5.1 7.5.2 The Firs 7.6.1 7.6.2 7.6.3	Everything Is 3D  Father of the Term Pixel (1874) ng What You Compute More Than Just Displays Cold to Hot (1922) The Magnetic Defection CRT (1912) nd Raster Vector Used for First Computers d War and Computer Graphics Whirlwind Was the First The SAGE – Semi-Automatic Ground Environment System t Video Display Terminals Plasma Displays (1964) Graphics Terminals Become Stand-Alone Products (1960s)	288 289 290 291 296 297 298 299 300 301 302 310

Contents xxi

		7.7.2	Differentiation Efforts	316
		7.7.3	Rise and Fall of Vector Display Suppliers	319
	7.8	Storage '	Tube Display Terminals	320
	7.9		t Raster-Scan Terminals (1970)	324
		7.9.1	Color CRTs (1954)	326
		7.9.2	Graphics Terminals	331
		7.9.3	Color IN the Home and Office	337
	7.10	What Ar	re You Looking At?	338
		7.10.1	Enter the LCDs	338
		7.10.2	OLED	339
		7.10.3	Quantum Dots	340
		7.10.4	Touch Screens	341
		7.10.5	Resolution and Screen Size	342
	7.11	The Mor	re You Can See—the More You Can Do	344
		7.11.1	Multiple Projectors	348
		7.11.2	White Boards That Fill Walls and Are Active	349
		7.11.3	Curved Gaming Displays	351
		7.11.4	Where Does the Display Stop and the Computer Begin?	352
	7.12	High Dy	rnamic Range and Refresh	353
		7.12.1	Refresh Rate	353
		7.12.2	Dynamic Range	354
	7.13	Summar	у	355
	A	Appendi	X	355
		A.1	Pioneering Companies	355
		A.2	Calculation of Monitor PPI	356
		A.3	Moore's Law	356
	В	IBM and	l Video Standards	356
		B.1	EGA	357
		B.2	VGA and the PS/2	357
		B.3	IBM 8514	358
		B.4	VESA	358
		B.5	DDC/SDIC	360
		B.6	DVI	360
		B.7	HDMI	361
		B.8	DisplayPort	362
		B.9	USB	364
		B.10	The Connectors	366
		B.11	Those GAs	366
		B.12	Literature	369
	Refer	ences		369
8	Store	osconic 3	D in Computers	373
o	8.1	_	tion	373
	0.1	8.1.1	The Basic Pipeline	375
		0.1.1	The basic ripenile	513

xxii Contents

	8.2	Is Histo	ry Destiny?	376
	8.3	Stereoso	copy	377
	8.4		ereo Viewers	377
	8.5	The Firs	st Stereo Movie	379
	8.6	Stereop	lotters and Photogrammetry	381
	8.7	-	eo Computer Vision	383
	8.8		S3D?	385
	8.9		ereoscopic Displays	388
		8.9.1	Screen Lenses	388
		8.9.2	Head/Eye Tracking	389
	8.10	Active S	Shutter Glasses	390
	8.11	Passive	Glasses	391
	8.12		atforms and Techniques	395
		8.12.1	Display	395
	8.13	Applica	tions	396
		8.13.1	Molecules	396
		8.13.2	Engineering and Design	400
		8.13.3	Stereovision in Games	404
		8.13.4	Stereovision and Virtual Reality	412
		8.13.5	CAVEs and VR	419
		8.13.6	Run and Shoot	422
	8.14	Seeing 1	Is Believing	423
	8.15	_	ry	424
	Apper			425
	- 11	A .1	The History of S3D	425
		A.2	Symbols	425
	Refer	ences	······································	426
9	The F	uture		429
	9.1	Introduc	ction	429
	9.2		ure of 3D	430
	9.3		faces	431
	9.4		ry	431
Ine	dev			433

List of Figures

Fig. 1.1	Basic block diagram of a 3D graphics computer	2
Fig. 1.2	A computer generated architectural rendering of an
_	interior (© Koncept Info Technologies)	3
Fig. 1.3	Basic representation of 3D space with 3-Axis	4
Fig. 1.4	Three axis or dimensions to describe the size of a book	5
Fig. 1.5	Car model courtesy of Nvidia (Advanced Rendering
_	Center), rendered with mental ray®	5
Fig. 1.6	Smoke and hair—all simulations created in a computer
	(© Jos Stam and Henrik Jensen & Andrew Selle and Michael Lentine, respectively)	6
Fig. 1.7	The History of Visual Magic in Computers traces a complex and exciting path	7
Fig. 1.8	Penetration of 3D into computing platforms	7
Fig. 2.1	The math is the foundation of all 3D graphics	12
Fig. 2.2	"Mr. 3D guy", a computer-generated image of a face
	(Courtesy of Takayoshi Sato and Sheen Hara)	13
Fig. 2.3	Triangle mesh for computer-generated image of a face;
	a head of less than 2,500 triangles driven by 36 bones
	(Courtesy of Takayoshi Sato and Sheen Hara)	14
Fig. 2.4	Georges Seurat – The Side Show (1888) – detail showing pointillism technique (Copyright free, image is in the public domain)	14
Fig. 2.5	Pyramids represented the first successful
	implementations of 3D mathematics (© Historylink101.com)	16
Fig. 2.6	Thales, the father of science (Copyright free, image is in the public domain)	18
Fig. 2.7	Pythagoras gave us the fundamental equation for calculating the triangle, the basic element of all 3D
	(Courtesy of Galilea (CC BY-SA 3.0))	19
Fig. 2.8	The triangle is the elemental component of all
	computer graphics	19
Fig. 2.9	Euclid, the father of geometry (Copyright free, image	_ released into the public domain by Mark A. Wilson)	20

xxiv List of Figures

Fig. 2.10	Hellenistic mathematician Euclid details geometrical algebra to bystanders (Copyright free, image is in the public domain)	21
Fig. 2.11	Babylonian base 10 positional number systems	21
Fig. 2.12	Conic sections, curves created by slicing through a cone (courtesy of Magister Mathematicae (CC BY-SA 3.0))	22
Fig. 2.13	Apollonius of Perga and author "Conic Sections" (Courtesy of eBooks@Adelaide)	23
Fig. 2.14	A $3 \times 3$ Magic Square give a sum value of 15 in any direction	23
Fig. 2.14	Jiu Zhang Suan Shu, the father of Matrix mathematics	23
1 ig. 2.13	(Courtesy of University of Lisbon)	24
Fig. 2.16	Myan numbering system with a zero character	25
Fig. 2.17	Heron, father of 3D (Copyright free, image is in the	23
11g. 2.17	1.12 - 1 - 2.5	26
Fig. 2.18	Omar Khayyam the father of Algebra (Copyright free,	20
1 ig. 2.10	image is in the public domain)	27
Fig. 2.19	Omar Khayyam's geometric solution to cubic	21
1 ig. 2.17	equations (© Pieter Kuiper)	27
Fig. 2.20	The understanding of perspective evolved to a science	21
115. 2.20	during the renaissance (Courtesy of the National University of Singapore)	28
Fig. 2.21	Filippo Brunelleschi the father of perspective	20
1 ig. 2.21	(Copyright free, image is in the public domain)	29
Fig. 2.22	Brunelleschi's perspective drawing of the Church of	29
1 1g. 2.22	Santo Spirito (Copyright free, image is in the public domain)	30
Fig. 2.23	Piero della Francesca (Courtesy of the Art Renewal Center)	30
Fig. 2.24	Piero della Francesca's The Flagellation (Copyright	50
1 1g. 2.24	free, image is in the public domain)	31
Fig. 2.25	Rene Descartes the father of the coordinate system	51
1 1g. 2.23	(Copyright free, image is in the public domain)	32
Fig. 2.26	The basic Cartesian system	33
Fig. 2.27	An example of matrix notation	34
Fig. 2.28	Pyramid template (© Gijs Korthals Altes: http://www.	54
1 ig. 2.20	korthalsaltes.com)	35
	Rotualsates.com/
Fig. 3.1	The software algorithms used for creating 3D images	38
Fig. 3.2	Curved surfaces are created using the tangential intersections of parametric planes (©Massachusetts
	Institute of Technology/MIT I-Tango Project)	41
Fig. 3.3	A French curve templates (Courtesy of Radomił Binek
	(CC BY-SA 3.0))	41
Fig. 3.4	A conic is the intersection of a plane and a right circular cone	42
Fig. 3.5	Lofting table with flexible ruler and ducks (Courtesy of MIT)	43
Fig. 3.6	North American Aviation's WWII P51 Mustang (U.S.
	Air Force Photo; copyright free, image is in the public domain)	43

List of Figures xxv

Fig. 3.7	Graphics representation of the Coons patch (Copyright	45
E:- 2.0	free, image released into the public domain by StuRat)	45
Fig. 3.8	NURBS surface (Courtesy of Maksim (CC BY-SA 3.0))	45
Fig. 3.9	Control points influence the directions the surface takes three-dimensional NURBS surfaces can have complex, organic shapes, line spline lines, depending upon the number of control points used (Courtesy of	1.0
E: 2.10	Greg A L (CC BY-SA 3.0))	46
Fig. 3.10	Bresenham's line algorithm	47
Fig. 3.11	IBM 2250 display unit circa 1965 (Courtesy of Frank	40
F: 2.12	da Cruz, Columbia University)	48
Fig. 3.12	TRON Light cycle characters compete to be the last	40
F: 0.10	one riding (Copyright free, GNU General Public License)	49
Fig. 3.13	Construction and destruction using primitives in CSG	~ 0
T. 0.44	(Courtesy of Captain Sprite (CC BY-SA 3.0))	50
Fig. 3.14	Using implicit modeling to blend two spheres
	(Courtesy of Brian Wyvill)	51
Fig. 3.15	Jim Blinn's Blobby Man (Courtesy of Brian Wyvill)	52
Fig. 3.16	Implicit Sea Anemone on implicit Rock (Courtesy of
	Mai Nur)	52
Fig. 3.17	Implicit engine (Courtesy of Herbert Grassberger)	53
Fig. 3.18	An example of a FEA of a body under stress (Courtesy of Bal 79 (CC BY-SA 3.0))	54
Fig. 3.19	A simple 3D cube	56
Fig. 3.20	A cube can be turned into a truncated pyramid
	(Courtesy of Darren Irvine) (Irvine drew the truncated pyramids using AutoCAD)	56
Fig. 3.21	Triangle man (Courtesy of Takayoshi Sato and Sheen Hara)	57
Fig. 3.22	A surface normal	58
Fig. 3.23	Flat vs. Gouraud shading (Copyright free, image released into the public domain by Lukáš Buričin)	59
Fig. 3.24	Flat vs. Phong shading (Copyright free, image released into the public domain by Jalo)	59
Fig. 3.25	The Utah Beatle image (Courtesy of the University of Utah)	60
Fig. 3.26	Phong vs. Blinn-Phong (Courtesy of Brad Smith
	(CC BY-SA 3.0))	61
Fig. 3.27	The Utah tea pot (Reprinted from Blinn and Newell [31])	62
Fig. 3.28	Applying a texture map to achieve a bumpy surface
	(Courtesy of www.paulsprojects.net)	63
Fig. 3.29	The Utah teapot with and without anti-aliasing
	(Courtesy of the University of Utah)	64
Fig. 3.30	Comparison of trilinear filtering vs. anisotropic
	(Courtesy of Lampak (CC BY-SA 3.0))	65
Fig. 3.31	Ray tracing (Courtesy of Henrik (CC BY-SA 3.0))	66

xxvi List of Figures

Fig. 3.32	Ray tracing of three shinny balls (Reprinted from Whitted [41])	66
Fig. 3.33	Particle system used to create a simulation of a bomb exploding (Courtesy of Sameboat (CC BY-SA 3.0))	68
Fig. 3.34	Fire with cellular patterns (©Jeong-Mo Hong and Tamar Shinar)	68
Fig. 3.35	Smoke and fire example using fluid dynamics (Courtesy of Sitni Sati, FumeFX)	69
Fig. 3.36	Nvidia's Dawn's skin was rendered in real time in 2001 on a consumer class graphics board (©2012
Fig. 3.37	Nvidia Corporation. All rights reserved)	70 consumer-level hardware (©Jorge Jiminez: http://
Fig. 3.38	www.iryoku.com/separable-sss-released)	71 71
Fig. 4.1	The applications	78
Fig. 4.2	3D applications	79
Fig. 4.3	Engineers evaluating a proposed automobile's interior (© Mercedes-Benz)	80
Fig. 4.4	Westinghouse's electromechanical NIM computer (Reproduced from The American Mathematical Monthly vol. 49, 1942, courtesy of The Mathematical Association of America)	81
Fig. 4.5	Charlie Adams, the original programmer, invented the Bouncing Ball Program, the solution of three differential equations (© 2004 Wayne E. Carlson)	82
Fig. 4.6	The NIMROD computer, the second instance of a digital computer designed specifically to play a game (Courtesy of Pete Goodeve)	83
Fig. 4.7	Dr. Dietrich Prinz loading chess program into a Ferranti Mark I computer (1955) (Courtesy of Hulton-Deutsch Collection/CORBIS)	84
Fig. 4.8	Digital Equipment Corp PDP 6 developed in 1963 (Courtesy of Vintchip.com)	85
Fig. 4.9	EDSAC I, 9-in. tubes used for monitoring (Copyright © Computer Laboratory, University of Cambridge.
Fig. 4.10	Reproduced by permission (CC BY 2.0))	85
Fig. 4.11	(Courtesy of David Winter: www.pong-story.com)	86 87

List of Figures xxvii

Fig. 4.12	Higinbotham's Brookhaven Tennis game setup (© U.S. Department of Energy)	87
Fig. 4.13	PDP-1 circa 1960 computer (Frank da Cruz, Columbia University Computing History)	88
Fig. 4.14	The Spacewar! needle and the wedge (Courtesy of Joi Ito: http://www.flickr.com/people/joi/ (CC BY 2.0))	89
Fig. 4.15	Spacewar! first digital computer game (Courtesy of Massachusetts Institute of Technology)	90
Fig. 4.16	Part of the evolution of computers has been the development of gaming platforms	91
Fig. 4.17	Early Pong console in an arcade (courtesy of ProhibitOnions (CC BY 2.5))	92
Fig. 4.18	Students on the PLATO system (Photo copyright © by the Board of Trustees, University of Illinois)	94
Fig. 4.19	The Maze point of view – first 3D puzzle game (© Digibarn Computer Museum)	96
Fig. 4.20	An example of the text-based Adventure game	97
Fig. 4.21	Wolfenstein 3D was the first PC-based 3D First-person shooter (© id Software, LLC, a ZeniMax Media company)	98
Fig. 4.22	Arma 3 (©2013 Bohemia Interactive)	98
Fig. 4.23	Ivan Sutherland demonstrating Sketchpad (Courtesy of MIT)	100
Fig. 4.24	First computer graphics human body done by William Fetter at Boeing in 1964 (© William Allan Fetter)	102
Fig. 4.25	First interactive CAD system, DAC-1, circa 1959
Fig. 4.26	(Courtesy of IBM)  Early molecule model on a vector display (courtesy of	104
Fig. 4.27	Peter Murray-Rust (CC-BY 2.5))	107
Fig. 4.28	Berkeley National Laboratory)	108
Fig. 4.29	of Smurrayinchester (CC BY-SA 3.0))	111 112
Fig. 4.30	Mr. 3D guy's 2,500 triangles (Courtesy of Takayoshi Sato and Sheen Hara)	112
Fig. 4.31	Good lighting, physical movements, and reasonable lip-synch make characters inanimations entertaining
	(Courtesy of Blender Foundation)	114

xxviii List of Figures

Fig. 4.32	3D Geophysical simulation-visualization (Courtesy of Kerry Key, SCRIPPS Institution of Oceanography)	115
Fig. 4.33	3D simulation-visualization of a laser target capsule	113
116. 1.55	for nuclear testing (Courtesy of Lawrence Livermore
	National Laboratory)	116
Fig. 4.34	Temperature simulation (Courtesy of AVS/Express)	116
Fig. 4.35	747 cockpit simulator circa 1992 (© NASA)	117
Fig. 4.36	Wolfenstein 3D circa 1992 (© id Software, LLC, a	11,
115. 1.50	ZeniMax Media company)	118
Fig. 4.37	Microsoft's Flight Simulator (© Microsoft®)	118
Fig. 4.38	Ghost Recon (© Ubisoft Entertainment)	119
Fig. 4.39	CPU processing done in a game (© Qualcomm Incorporated)	120
Fig. 4.40	SRC7 convertible image created by Kheang Chrun	120
1180	using the Lightworks rendering engine (Courtesy of Lightwork Design. Copyright Kheang Chrun)	120
Fig. 4.41	Car racing game example of surface reflections, X	120
118	Motor Racing (2012) (Courtesy of X-Motor Racing)	121
Fig. 5.1	The computer	126
Fig. 5.2	The ancient Antikythera Greek mechanism (Courtesy of Marsyas (CC BY-SA 3.0))	128
Fig. 5.3	Grecian water clock (Copyright free, image is in the
	public domain)	130
Fig. 5.4	The verge escapement in Giovanni de' Dondi's
	Astrarium's tracing of an illustration originally from his 1364 clock treatise, Il Tractatus Astarii (Copyright free, image is in the public domain)	132
Fig. 5.5	Jacquard loom cards (Copyright free, image released into the public domain by George H. Williams)	133
Fig. 5.6	An IBM punch card based on the Hollerith code
	(Courtesy of the IBM Corporate Archive)	134
Fig. 5.7	Charles Babbage designer of the Difference Engine
	computer (Copyright free, image is in the public domain)	134
Fig. 5.8	The London Science Museum's replica Difference	105
	Engine, built from Babbage's design	135
Fig. 5.9	Ben Franklin discovers electricity – an artistic rendition of the kite experiment by Benjamin West	100
T: 5.40	(Copyright free, image is in the public domain)	136
Fig. 5.10	Ferdinand Braun (1850–1918) the father of semiconductors and the CRT (Copyright free, image is	105
	in the public domain)	137
Fig. 5.11	The Braun CRT (Courtesy of The Cathode Ray Tube	100
E: 5.10	Site [17])	138
Fig. 5.12	Nikola Tesla (1856–1943) the inventor of the logic	100
	AND gate (Copyright free, image is in the public domain)	139

List of Figures xxix

Fig. 5.13	Vannevar Bush (Copyright free, image released into	1.41
T: 5.14	the public domain by the United States Library of Congress)	141
Fig. 5.14	Vannevar Bush's differential analyzer (Copyright free,	1.11
	image is in the public domain)	141
Fig. 5.15	Alan Turing (1912–1954) (Photo courtesy of Ian
	Watson [111])	142
Fig. 5.16	Konrad Zus (Courtesy of ArtMechanic (CC BY-SA 3.0))	143
Fig. 5.17	Zuse Z1 replica in the German Museum of Technology
	in Berlin (Courtesy of BLueFiSH.as (CC BY-SA 3.0))	143
Fig. 5.18	John Atanasoff (© (www.computer-enthusiast.
	com) and Clifford Berry and courtesy of Iowa State University, respectively)	144
Fig. 5.19	The ABC Atanasoff-Berry computer (Courtesy of
	Iowa State University)	145
Fig. 5.20	ENIAC (Electronic Numerical Integrator And Computer) in the Ballistic Research Laboratory building 328 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania (U.S.
	Army Photo, image is in the public domain)	147
Fig. 5.21	Whirlwind: first interactive computer graphics computer. Stephen Dodd, Jay Forrester, Robert Everett, and Ramona Ferenz at Whirlwind I test control in the Barta Building, 1950 (Courtesy of MIT)	149
Fig. 5.22	Seeburg Ray-O-Lite game machine 1936 (Courtesy of 'biggles').	151
Fig. 5.23	Using a light gun on a SAGE air defense screen to pick
	a target aircraft (Courtesy of IBM)	151
Fig. 5.24	IBM 704 at Lawrence Livermore National Labs
	(Courtesy of Lawrence Livermore National Labs (www.llnl.org))	153
Fig. 5.25	Data General Nova 800 minicomputer with tape deck
	(Courtesy of Dave Fischer (CC BY-SA 3.0))	155
Fig. 5.26	IBM 1620 "CADET" personal scientific computer,
	circa 1959 (Courtesy of Crazytales (CC BY-SA 3.0))	157
Fig. 5.27	Alan Kay, inventor of the Dynabook and the Alto
J	(Courtesy of PARC, a Xerox company)	159
Fig. 5.28	Xerox Alto workstation (Courtesy of PARC, a Xerox company)	160
Fig. 5.29	Apollo DN330, one of the first stand-alone
8 , 2, 3	workstations (Courtesy of Jim Rees (CC BY-SA 2.5))	162
Fig. 5.30	The SUN-1 workstation computer, circa 1983 (©SUN
8	Microsystems, Inc)	163
Fig. 5.31	The long path of graphics workstation development to	100
116. 5.51	a graphics AIB	165
Fig. 5.32	SGI's IRIS 2000 graphics workstation (circa 1985)	105
116. 3.32	(Courtesy of Silicon Graphics International)	168
Fig. 5.33	HP's 9826 Technical computer (circa 1981)	100
1 15. 3.33	(©Hewlett-Packard)	171
Fig. 5.34	IBM RT CADAM workstation (Courtesy of IBM)	172
1 1g. J.J4	IDIVI KI CADAIVI WOIKSIAUOII (COULIESY OI IDIVI)	1/2