Wiley Blackwell Companions in Cultural Studies

Advisory editor: David Theo Goldberg, University of California, Irvine

This series provides theoretically ambitious but accessible volumes devoted to the major fields and subfields within cultural studies, whether as single disciplines (film studies) inspired and reconfigured by interventionist cultural studies approaches or from broad interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary perspectives (gender studies, race and ethnic studies, postcolonial studies). Each volume sets out to ground and orientate the student through a broad range of specially commissioned articles and also to provide the more experienced scholar and teacher with a convenient and comprehensive overview of the latest trends and critical directions. An overarching Companion to Cultural Studies will map the territory as a whole.

Notes on Contributors

Edwin Amenta is a professor of sociology, political science, and history at the University of California, Irvine. His most recent books are Professor Baseball: Searching for Redemption and the Perfect Lineup on the Softball Diamonds of New York (2007) and When Movements Matter: The Townsend Plan and the Rise of Social Security (2008), and he is coeditor (with Kate Nash and Alan Scott) of the Wiley-Blackwell Companion to Political Sociology (2012).

Eric Anderson is a professor of sport, masculinities, and sexualities at the University of Winchester, UK. He is recognized as an academician of the British Academy of Social Sciences and a fellow of the International Association of Sex Researchers. His research on sport, masculinities, and sexualities shows an increasingly positive relationship between gay male athletes and sport as well as a growing movement of young heterosexual men's masculinity becoming softer and more inclusive. He also researches matters related to men's monogamy and the positive function of relationship cheating, men's improving recognition of bisexuality, and the increased acceptance of young heterosexual men kissing. He has written 12 books and is regularly featured across the media.

David L. Andrews is Professor of Physical Cultural Studies in the Department of Kinesiology at the University of Maryland at College Park, an affiliate faculty member of the departments of American Studies and Sociology, and a visiting professor in the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences at the University of Bath. He is an assistant editor of the Journal of Sport & Social Issues, and an editorial board member of the Sociology of Sport Journal, the International Review for the Sociology of Sport, and Kinesiological Review.

He is coeditor (with Michael L. Silk) of Sport and Neoliberalism: Politics, Consumption, and Culture (2012).

Michael Atkinson is an associate professor in the Faculty of Kinesiology and Physical Education at the University of Toronto, where he teaches physical cultural studies and is director of the Sport Legacies Research Collaborative. His central areas of interest (both teaching and research) pertain to alternative physical cultures, biopedagogical practices in sport, and issues in bioethics within global and local sport cultures. He is author/editor of seven books, including Battleground Sport (2008), Deviance and Social Control in Sport (with Kevin Young, 2008), and Deconstructing Men and Masculinities (2010).

Michael Bérubé is the Edwin Erle Sparks Professor of Literature and Director of the Institute for the Arts and Humanities at Pennsylvania State University. In 2012 he served as the president of the Modern Language Association. His most recent book is The Left at War (2009), and he is currently working on a book about cognitive disability and narrative theory.

Amy L. Best is Associate Professor of Sociology in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at George Mason University. Her research focuses on the study of youth, culture, and social inequalities, with a particular interest in how gender, ethnicity, sexuality, race, and class differently shape the social experiences of contemporary American youth. She is interested in qualitative and feminist approaches to social research. She is author of Prom Night Youth, Schools and Popular Culture (2000), selected for the 2002 American Educational Studies Association Critics' Choice Award, and Fast Cars, Cool Rides: The Accelerating World of Youth and Their Cars (2006), and editor of Representing Youth: Methodological Issues in Critical Youth Studies (2007).

Douglas Booth is Professor of Sport and Leisure Studies and Dean of the School of Physical Education at the University of Otago. His research interests include historiography, extreme sport, and the politics of sport. He is the author of The Race Game (1998), Australian Beach Cultures (2001), and The Field (2005). He serves on the editorial boards of numerous journals, including Rethinking History, Journal of Sport History, and Sport History Review, and is an executive member of the Australian Society for Sport History.

Daniel Burdsey is Principal Lecturer in Sociology at the University of Brighton. He has written and published widely on sport and popular culture within British Asian communities. He is the author of British Asians and Football: Culture, Identity and Exclusion (2007) and the editor of Race, Ethnicity and Football: Persisting Debates and Emergent Issues (2011). He is also the editor (with Stanley Thangaraj and Rajinder Dudrah) of a special issue of South Asian Popular Culture on "Sport and South Asian diasporas" (2013).

Ben Carrington teaches sociology at the University of Texas at Austin and is a Carnegie Research Fellow at Leeds Metropolitan University. He is author of Race, Sport and Politics: The Sporting Black Diaspora (2010) and editor (with Ian McDonald) of Marxism, Cultural Studies and Sport (2009).

C.L. Cole is a professor of gender and women's studies, sociology, and communications research at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, where she teaches courses in feminist cultural studies, critical sexuality and race studies, and body studies. She is the author/editor of four books, including the forthcoming Good Sports? The Boundaries of American Democracy. She is the editor of the Journal of Sport & Social Issues, and serves on the editorial boards of Cultural Studies ↔ Critical Methodologies, Qualitative Research in Sport & Exercise Science, and the New York University Press book series Biopolitics: Medicine, Technoscience, and Health in the 21st Century.
