Notes on Contributors

Elizabeth Archibald is Reader in Medieval Studies at the University of Bristol. She is the co-editor, with A. S. G. Edwards, of A Companion to Malory (1996), and has published numerous essays on Arthurian literature; she is currently co-editing, with Ad Putter, The Cambridge Companion to the Arthurian Legend (forthcoming 2008). She is also the author of Apollonius of Tyre (1991) and Incest and the Medieval Imagination (2001).

Susan Aronstein is Professor of English at the University of Wyoming and the author of Hollywood Knights: Arthurian Cinema and the Politics of Nostalgia (2005). She has also published articles on medieval French and Welsh Arthurian romances, Arthurian film, and medievalism and popular culture. She and Robert Torry are currently co-writing a book on the films of Steven Spielberg.

Geraldine Barnes has a personal chair in medieval literature at the University of Sydney. Her main research interests are the ethos and development of romance in medieval England and Iceland, the reception of Old French chivalric narrative in Scandinavia, the Norse “discovery” of America as related in the “Vínland sagas,” and medieval influences on early modern English travel writing. Her books include Counsel and Strategy in Middle English Romance (1993), Viking America: The First Millennium (2001), and the edited collection Travel and Travellers from Bede to Dampier (2005).

Inga Bryden is Principal Lecturer in English and Head of Research in the Faculty of Arts at the University of Winchester, UK. She has published on nineteenth-century literature and culture, including the book Reinventing King Arthur: The Arthurian Legends in Victorian Culture (2005), the Pre-Raphaelites, and the city in literature and visual culture.

Lesley Coote, from the University of Hull, is the author of Prophecy and Public Affairs in Later Medieval England (2000) and has written (and co-written) several articles on this subject. She specializes in teaching literature through film, and runs courses on medieval outlaws, Arthurian and other medieval romance, Augustan satire, and the Hollywood western. Her recent article on Arthurian film for Studies in Medievalism was co-written with her late colleague Dr Brian Levy, for whose memorial volume she has produced an article on monstrosity and humor in Richard Coeur de Lyon. A committed educationalist and Fellow of the Higher Education Academy, she has produced a “student-friendly” edition of Chaucer’s Canterbury Tales (2002) and has just completed two pedagogical projects on creative assessment in English Studies and on the use of electronic technology in learning and teaching English.

Roger Dalrymple is Principal Lecturer in Education at Buckinghamshire New University and publishes in both medieval English studies and education studies. He is author of Language and Piety in Middle English Romance (2000) and Middle English: A Guide to Criticism (2004) and co-editor of the monograph series, Studies in Medieval Romance.

Tony Davenport is Emeritus Professor of Medieval Literature in the University of London and Fellow of the English Association. His most recent book is Medieval Narrative: An Introduction (2004). He has essays forthcoming on the Welsh element in Middle English Romances, on Pearl, and on Sir Gawain and the Green Knight.

Geraint Evans is Lecturer in Media and Communication Studies at Swansea University. His major research areas are publishing history, radio and modernism, and the literatures of Wales, in Welsh and English. He has published a number of articles in these areas and is currently completing a book on David Jones.

Laurie A. Finke is Professor of Women's and Gender Studies at Kenyon College. She is author of Feminist Theory, Women's Writing (1992) and Women's Writing in English: Medieval England (1999), as well as editor of the Norton Anthology of Theory and Criticism (2001). Professor Finke is a long-standing collaborator with Martin B. Shichtman, and they are currently co-authoring Cinematic Illuminations: The Middle Ages on Film.

Jeanne Fox-Friedman is a Professor of Art History at New York University. She has published on both medieval and modern visual interpretations of the Arthurian legend. Her scholarly investigations include such diverse subjects as the Romanesque art of northern Italy, medieval women artists, and nineteenth-century children's book illustration.

Helen Fulton is Professor of English at Swansea University and Director of the Centre for Medieval and Early Modern Research (MEMO). Her main research areas are the interface between medieval Welsh and English literatures, multilingual manuscripts in Wales, political and prophetic poetry, and medieval representations of urban space. Recent books include an edited collection, Medieval Celtic Literature and Society (2005), and a co-edited volume, Medieval Cultural Studies (2006).

Joan Tasker Grimbert is Professor of French and Chair of Modern Languages and Literatures at Catholic University (Washington, DC). Treasurer of the International Arthurian Society, she has published five books, primarily on Arthurian romance, including Tristan and Isolde: A Casebook (1995), and, with Norris J. Lacy, A Companion to Chrétien de Troyes (2005). Her current research focuses on the Prose Cligés.

Andrew Hadfield is Professor of English at the University of Sussex. He is the author of numerous works on English Renaissance literature, including Shakespeare and Republicanism (2005, paperback 2008), and Literature, Travel and Colonial Writing in the English Renaissance, 1545-1625 (1998, paperback, 2007). He is the editor of the Cambridge Companion to Spenser (2001) and, with Abe Stoll, The Faerie Queene, Book Six and The Mutabilitie Cantos (2007).

Will Hasty is Professor of German Studies, Chair of the Department of Germanic and Slavic Studies, and Co-director of the Center for Medieval and Early Modern Studies at the University of Florida. He has published extensively on court literature of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, with particular focus on Germany and the romances of Hartmann von Aue, Wolfram von Eschenbach, and Gottfried von Strassburg. His books include Adventures in Interpretation: The Work of Hartman von Aue and their Critical Reception (1995) and the edited collection A Companion to Gottfried von Strassburg's Tristan (2003).

Nickolas Haydock is Professor of English at the University of Puerto Rico, Mayagüez, where he has taught for the past thirteen years. His publications on films about the Middle Ages include Movie Medievalism: The Imaginary Middle Ages (2008) and a forthcoming volume edited with Edward Ridsen, Hollywood in the Holy Land: The Fearful Symmetries of Movie Medievalism (2008). He lives happily on the enchanted isle with his dear wife, Socorro.

Nicholas Higham is Professor of Early Medieval and Landscape History at the University of Manchester, where he is currently also Head of History. His research interests center on the insular early Middle Ages in the areas primarily of history and archaeology, and the landscape history of medieval England, with a particular focus on the northwest. Recent monographs include King Arthur: Myth-Making and History (2002), A Frontier Landscape: The North West in the Middle Ages (2004), and [Re]Reading Bede: The Ecclesiastical History in Context (2006), and he is also a frequent contributor to a variety of academic and popular journals.

Karen Jankulak is a Lecturer in Medieval History and Director of the MA in Arthurian Studies at the University of Wales Lampeter. Her research interests are in the connections between Ireland, Wales, Cornwall, and Brittany, especially as shown in the cults of saints and the Arthurian legends. She is currently working on a volume on Geoffrey of Monmouth and Welsh tradition.

Edward Donald Kennedy is Professor of English and Comparative Literature at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He is the author of Chronicles and Other Historical Writing (vol. 8 of A Manual of the Writings in Middle English, ed. A. E. Hartung [1989]) and editor of King Arthur: A Casebook (1996, 2002). He edits the journal Studies in Philology, and he has written about 50 articles, primarily on Arthurian subjects. He is a subject editor for the forthcoming Brill Encyclopedia of the Medieval Chronicle.

Roberta L. Krueger is Burgess Professor of French at Hamilton College. She is the author of Women Readers and the Ideology of Gender in Old French Verse Romance (1993) and editor of The Cambridge Companion to Medieval Romance (2000). She participated in the TEAM translation of the Lancelot-Grail Cycle (1992-6) and has written numerous articles on medieval French romance, as well as on late medieval conduct literature, including the Ménagier de Paris, the Enseignements of the Chevalier de la Tour Landry, and the didactic work of Christine de Pizan. Her current research examines the intersection of conduct literature and courtly narrative in medieval France.

Robert Paul Lamb received his doctorate in American Civilization from Harvard University and is professor of English at Purdue University. The co-editor of Blackwell's Companion to American Fiction, 1865-1914 (2005), he has authored James G. Birney and the Road to Abolitionism (1994) and numerous articles on Melville, Whitman, Twain, Hemingway, Langston Hughes, naturalism, film theory, and pedagogy. His book, Art Matters: Hemingway, Craft, and the Modern Short Story, is forthcoming from Louisiana State University Press.

Alan Lane is Senior Lecturer in the School of History and Archaeology, Cardiff University. He is a specialist in the study of the settlements and artifacts of the post-Roman Celtic West and North. His excavations and publications include the early medieval settlement of Longbury Bank, the Brecon royal crannog site of Llangorse, and Dunadd, the royal capital of early Dál Riata.

Carolynne Larrington teaches medieval English at St John's College, Oxford. She has recently written King Arthur's Enchantresses (2006), about Morgan le Fay and other Arthurian enchantresses, and she is currently working on some Old Norse versions of Arthurian texts.

Ceridwen Lloyd-Morgan retired in 2006 as Head of Manuscripts and Visual Images in the National Library of Wales, Aberystwyth. She is Honorary Research Fellow in the School of Welsh, Cardiff University, and a Member of the Centre for Medieval Studies, Bangor University.

Alan Lupack is the author of The Oxford Guide to Arthurian Literature and Legend (2005) and co-author of King Arthur in America (1999). He has edited medieval and post-medieval Arthurian texts, serves as the Associate Editor of the TEAMS Middle English Texts series, and is creator and General Editor of the electronic database The Camelot Project at the University of Rochester.

Andrew Lynch teaches in English and Cultural Studies at the University of Western Australia. His publications include Malory's Book of Arms (1997) and articles on Malory. He also writes on the medieval tradition of war and peace, on
