

palgrave▶pivot

GIRLS OF COLOR, SEXUALITY, AND SEX EDUCATION

Sharon Lamb,
Tangela Roberts and
Aleksandra Plocha

Girls of Color, Sexuality, and Sex Education

Sharon Lamb • Tangela Roberts • Aleksandra Plocha

Girls of Color, Sexuality, and Sex Education

palgrave
macmillan

Sharon Lamb
University of Massachusetts Boston
Boston, Massachusetts, USA

Aleksandra Plocha
University of Massachusetts Boston
Boston, Massachusetts, USA

Tangela Roberts
University of Massachusetts Boston
Boston, Massachusetts, USA

ISBN 978-1-137-60153-7
DOI 10.1057/978-1-137-60155-1

ISBN 978-1-137-60155-1 (eBook)

Library of Congress Control Number: 2016949550

© The Editor(s) (if applicable) and The Author(s) 2016

This work is subject to copyright. All rights are solely and exclusively licensed by the Publisher, whether the whole or part of the material is concerned, specifically the rights of translation, reprinting, reuse of illustrations, recitation, broadcasting, reproduction on microfilms or in any other physical way, and transmission or information storage and retrieval, electronic adaptation, computer software, or by similar or dissimilar methodology now known or hereafter developed.

The use of general descriptive names, registered names, trademarks, service marks, etc. in this publication does not imply, even in the absence of a specific statement, that such names are exempt from the relevant protective laws and regulations and therefore free for general use. The publisher, the authors and the editors are safe to assume that the advice and information in this book are believed to be true and accurate at the date of publication. Neither the publisher nor the authors or the editors give a warranty, express or implied, with respect to the material contained herein or for any errors or omissions that may have been made.

Cover pattern © Harvey Loake

Printed on acid-free paper

This Palgrave Macmillan imprint is published by Springer Nature
The registered company is Nature America Inc.

The registered company address is: 1 New York Plaza, New York, NY 10004, U.S.A.

This book is dedicated to the boys and girls in our Sexual Ethics for a Caring Society classrooms, for their honesty and joy and for their persistent challenges that made us and the curriculum better

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The first author would like to thank the Spencer Foundation who provided funding through the New Civics grant program toward the teaching of the curriculum in schools, the Association for Moral Education (AME) for the original grant to write the Sexual Ethics for a Caring Society Curriculum (SECS-C), and University of Massachusetts Boston (UMass Boston) for its incredible support of faculty members' and students' research in growing PhD programs. Lyn Mikel Brown, her former writing partner, still remains a resource, source of encouragement, and guiding light in the area of girls' development.

We would also like to thank the girls, teachers, and counselors at the charter school in a suburb of Boston that supported this work. Their interest in providing a sexual ethics curriculum in addition to a health and prevention curriculum reflected their intensive focus on teaching their students to be responsible citizens and caring partners.

With enormous gratitude we thank Renee Randazzo who was a leader of this project for two years, taught the curriculum for five semesters, wrote first drafts of some portions of Chaps. 4 and 5, and who helped keep the focus on feminist analysis and heteronormativity throughout all our meetings. Her contributions infuse this book at every level. She is an amazing woman who combines her social justice activism in the classroom with an open and caring individualized approach to the students within it.

We also thank Madeline Brodt who taught for one semester and brought her fantastic energy and lively mind to each and every meeting. Lucas Dangler, Kaelin Farmer, and Elena Kosterina were also part of our research group and shaped our thinking with their insights and analysis.

Susan Lambe Sariñana, also a member of the research team, brought us to the wonderful charter school (which prefers to remain unnamed) and introduced us to the lovely counselor there who helped us form the focus groups and to teach our curriculum in the advisory periods.

We especially thank the journal editors and reviewers for the Canadian journal Girlhood Studies and the British journal Gender and Education. These two journals understand qualitative research and reflexivity required of interpretive work, and support the idea that White researchers as well as researchers of color may write about girls of color with respect and insight.

Finally, we thank our colleagues and peers in the Department of Counseling and School Psychology at UMass Boston, our best resource when we have questions and want to flesh out our thinking. We consider ourselves extremely fortunate to work among them.

CONTENTS

1	Introduction: Girls of Color, Sex, and Healthy Sexuality	1
2	Body Image, Sexy, and Sexualization	15
3	Respect	27
4	Girls of Color in Sex Education Classrooms	37
5	Girls of Color and the Media	53
6	Recommendations: Working with Girls of Color Around Issues of Sexuality, Sexualization, and Sex Education	67
	References	77
	Index	91

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Sharon Lamb, EdD, PhD, ABPP, and Harvard Graduate School of Education graduate, is Professor of Counseling Psychology in the Department of Counseling and School Psychology at UMass Boston. Sharon has written, edited, and coauthored nine books and won two awards: the Books for a Better Life Award, for Packaging Girlhood, and the Society for Sex Therapy and Research's book award for Sex, Therapy, and Kids. She is a coauthor of the American Psychological Association's Task Force Report on the Sexualization of Girls and, with Lyn Mikel Brown and Mark Tappan, Packaging Boyhood. Her most recent book, Sex Ed for Caring Schools: Creating an Ethics-Based Curriculum, published 2013. She currently cochairs the APA Task Force on the Revision of the Guidelines for Psychological Practice with Girls and Women. Sharon is currently working on the ethical reasoning of bystanders who intervene or choose not to intervene in "sketchy" sexual situations. An experienced clinician, Sharon also sees children, adolescents, adults, and couples at her therapy office in Shelburne, Vermont, and trains students at UMass Boston during their internship year. Sharon also does forensic evaluations in the state of Vermont as an expert on children's development, sexual abuse, harassment, and attachment. Sharon is married to pianist Paul Orgel, has two sons and two grandsons, and lives in Shelburne, Vermont.

Aleksandra Plocha, MS, is a doctoral candidate in the Counseling and School Psychology PhD program at UMass Boston. Aleksandra has her BA in Psychology from Boston College and MS in Mental Health Counseling from the University of Massachusetts Boston. Aleksandra's current research focuses on the topics of resilience, emerging adulthood, and bereavement. Her other areas of research include child and adolescent sexuality, sexual ethics, and familial patterns associated with a child's diagnosis of celiac disease. Aleksandra has experience working with college students, children, adolescents, adults, and families presenting with a variety of concerns, including stress and adjustment difficulties, mood disorders, psychosis, schizophrenia, substance abuse, and complex trauma. She also has experience working with individuals of all ages in psychiatric crisis. She considers her clinical orientation to be eclectic, primarily using client-centered and relational-based therapies.

Tangela Roberts, MS, is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Counseling and School Psychology at UMass Boston. While she is originally from Birmingham, Alabama, she received her MS in Community Counseling from the University of Wisconsin-Madison and her BA from St. John's University in Queens, New York. Primarily, she is interested in intersectionality, social justice, womanism, race and ethnicity, lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and/or queer (LGBTQ) issues, and sexual orientation identity development. Tangela's work on intersectionality research tends to focus on race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, discrimination, and community support. Tangela positions her work to be aimed at developing a better understanding of critical theories, while focusing on intersectional identities, resilience, and support. Previous research projects include the Black identity and community support; impact of biphobia on the sexual orientation identity development process of bisexual identified persons; the role of community support on mental health for bisexual people of color; and African-American and Latino gay family networks and HIV prevention. Tangela has two pet ferrets and lives in Boston, Massachusetts.