ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Antonio (Jay) Pastrana, Jr. is an Associate Professor in the Sociology Department and Deputy Director of the Gender Studies Program at John Jay College of Criminal Justice, City University of New York (CUNY). His research and scholarship calls attention to theoretical, methodological, and practical dilemmas within the field of intersectionality studies. Specifically, he examines how race-based marginalization affects the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and trans* (LGBT) people of color.

As a professor, Pastrana encourages students to participate in professional activities outside of the classroom, while helping them to connect their own lives to the task of critical inquiry. As a Principal Investigator of the Social Justice Sexuality Project, one of the largest national survey research projects to collect data on LGBT people of color, he is committed to ongoing efforts that document the lived experiences of these understudied populations. A New York City native, Pastrana engages various audiences in advancing the work produced by scholars exploring intersectional issues, specifically those whose focus includes race, class, gender and sexuality, and social justice.

Juan Battle is a Professor of Sociology, Public Health, and Urban Education at the Graduate Center of the CUNY. He is also the Coordinator of the Africana Studies Certificate Program.

His research focuses on race, sexuality, and social justice. In addition to having delivered lectures at a multitude of academic institutions, community-based organizations, and funding agencies throughout the world, Professor Battle's scholarship has included work throughout North America, South America, Africa, Asia, and Europe.

He is a Fulbright Senior Specialist; was the Fulbright Distinguished Chair of Gender Studies at the University of Klagenfurt, Austria; and was an Affiliate Faculty of the Institute for Gender and Development Studies, The University of the West Indies, St. Augustine, Trinidad, and Tobago.

Further, he is a former president of the Association of Black Sociologists and is actively involved with the American Sociological Association.

Angelique Harris is a Director of the Center for Gender and Sexualities Studies and the Women's and Gender Studies Program, and an Associate Professor of Sociology in the Department of Social and Cultural Sciences at the Helen Way Klingler College of Arts and Sciences. Her research and teaching interests include the sociology of health and illness, race and ethnicity, gender and sexuality, religion, urban studies, media studies, and social movements.

Her research examines social problems and issues within marginalized communities, primarily focusing on the experiences of women, people of color, and LGBTQ+ communities. Dr. Harris's primary research program studies how disadvantaged groups understand, construct, and respond to health issues as well as how the marginalization and stigmatization they experience impact their access to healthcare. She is the author of AIDS, Sexuality, and the Black Church: Making the Wounded Whole, and coauthored the writing reference books Writing for Emerging Sociologists and The Sociology Student's Guide to Writing.
