Preface

This volume was mainly written during the years I spent working as a scientific researcher at the Max-Planck-Institut für ausländisches und internationales Privatrecht in Hamburg. During that time, I had the opportunity to experience the immense value of comparative law as a source of creative legal thinking. The years spent in the financial industry also allowed me to complement the academic approach with pragmatic elements and a business perspective. I am grateful to all those who contributed to these exciting experiences.

This dissertation as well as the work performed as a member of the Study Group for a European Civil Code (Draft Common Frame of Reference) would not have been possible without the fabulous library of the Max-Planck-Institute. I wish to thank the Institute for treasuring the greatest international academic legacy for the benefit of researchers and visitors. I also thank my colleagues at the Max-Planck-Institut for their inspiring company and shared moments of academic work. I especially thank Nicole Monleón for her friendship and essential contribution to the PhD process and to Christoph Steck for his encouragement during the final phase.

I am deeply grateful to my supervisor, Prof. Dr. Mankowski, for his vision, profound trust and outstanding support. His generous words in his assessment's vote will remain source of encouragement. I further thank Prof. Dr. Freitag, for his also heartening second vote.

A warm and very special thanks to my parents and my sister Guadalupe for being my constant source of support and inspiration; and also to those key persons whose affection and care have provided me with balance and strength in life.

Die nachfolgende Arbeit wurde im April 2010 als Dissertation vom Fachbereich Rechtswissenschaft der Universität Hamburg angenommen.
